The Archbishop of Canterbury and the Roman Council—Mr. Disraeli on the Defensive—Dean Stanley's Sermon on Charles Dickens.

LONDON, June 20.—The Archbishop of Canterbury has addressed a letter to the Bishop of Bristol, discouraging any counter movement in the Church of England to the Ecumenical Council, and advising abstention from action as more dignified, wise and sober. His Grace considers the English formularies a sufficient response to the proceedings of the Roman Council....Mr. DISRAELI, in a second edition of Blackwood, replies sharply to the criticisms made on Lothair in that magazine.... Many people assembled yesterday to listen to the sermon of Dean STANLEY, of Westminster Abbey, on the late CHARLES DICKENS. A part of the last will of Mr. DICKENS was read. In that he declines a monument, but rests his fame on his published works. He also urges his children to practice Christianity in a broad spirit—not accepting the narrow construction of any man or any sect. The Dean closed with a glowing tribute to the illustrious dead.

Explosion of a Gunpowder Mill near London—The Death of Lord Arthur Clinton—A Fenian Funeral in Dublin—Treasure Recovered from a Wreck.

LONDON, June 20.—An explosion occurred yesterday in one of the Government powder mills at Waltham Abbey, near this city. Several people were killed....The death of Lord ARTHUR CLINTON, which occurred on Saturday, has created renewed interest in the case of the Boulton masqueraders. The dying declaration of this gentleman that he was innocent of the crimes imputed to him, is fully verified by his attendants and companions, who solemnly disclaim any criminal purpose in the Woman-personation folly....The funeral of Mrs. LUBY, the mother of the Fenian convicts, occurred at Dublin, yesterday. Great crowds of people, sympathizing with the Fenian movement, followed the remains to the grave.....A dispatch from Bombay reports that the divers have brought up some of the treasure lost on the wreck of the Cornelia Mitchell, near that place, and will probably succeed in recovering the entire amount....The telegraph reports slight showers during the night at scattered points in the Kingdom.

A Cable Project in Spain—Spanish Unity—Reform in Portugal—The Belgian Cabinet.

MADRID, June 20.—In the Cortes this morning Senor RIVERO submitted a project for a submarine telegraph cable to be laid from Spain to the Balearic Islands. The Imparcial insists that peninsular unity, under the house of BRAGANZA, is the aim of the revolutionary party.

LISBON, June 20.—Many of the reforms promised have already been promulgated. Decrees abolishing the death penalty and pensions appeared today, and the right of holding political meetings and the right of petition will be officially granted in a day or two.

PARIS, June 20.—The Emperor is still indisposed, but there is nothing in his condition to excite alarm....The resignation of the old Ministry at Brussels gives great satisfaction here.

BRUSSELS, June 20.—The Independance Belge is certain that the Clerical party will monopolize the new Cabinet.

CUBA.

A Second Landing by the George B. Upton—Arms, Ammunition and Men Landed—The Steamer Reported Ashore—Gun-Boats in Search of Her—The Dacia.

HAVANA, June 20.—The steamer George B. Upton has effected a second landing on the Cuban coast. The following particulars are given in the official report from Puerto Principe: The George B. Upton left Aspinwall on the 8th inst., and on the 12th reached the mouth of the river Herradura, on the Cuban shore. There she landed Col. LONG with twenty-two men and her entire cargo, consisting of a thousand stand of arms, a large quantity of ammunition and a French repeating cannon. Some correspondence between CESPEDES and CARPENTER, which has fallen into the hands of the Spaniards, shows that this cargo consisted of the material left on board at the first landing, supplemented with fresh supplies embarked at Aspinwall. Six of the filibusters have been killed since landing, but whether they belonged to the first or second party is not stated. A rumor that the Upton was ashore somewhere on the coast has sent a number of gunboats in search of her. Ten cases of vomito and cholera are reported in the jurisdiction of Puerto Principe....The English steam-ship Dacia, with the new West India cable on board, has arrived at Porto Rico after a pleasant passage. Sir CHARLES BRIGHT, one of the originators of the new enterprise, was a passenger. The laying of the cable between St. Thomas, Porto Rico and Jamaica will begin immediately.

Return of the Steamer George B. Upton—Two Expeditions Landed on the Coast of Cuba.

The steamer George B. Upton, which left this port on the 16th of May, and about which so many conflicting rumors have been afloat, arrived off Sandy Hook yesterday morning.

When the Upton sailed, her point of destination was not positively known, but it was supposed she called for Cuba with a cargo of arms, ammunition for the insurgents. These reports have since been verified by telegraph, and it is fully from official sources that the supplies landed were captured by the Spaniards.

A second landing was effected, of which the Spaniards knew nothing until the present time. After leaving New-York the Upton proceeded immediately to Cuba, and on the north coast of the island, about forty miles from Nuevitas, the landed about 200 men and 1,000 stand of arms, together with a large amount of ammunition. When the supplies were landed, having no means of transportation, they were concealed on the coast until an opportunity should offer to convey them to the interior.

The 200 marched inland to join the insurgent army, leaving a guard of thirteen men on the coast. This small guard was subsequently surprised by the Spaniards. Ten of them were killed, and the remaining three were taken prisoners, after having given information of the place of embarkation of the arms. In the meanwhile the Upton left the coast and sailed for Aspinwall where, on the 31 of June, she embarked 100 more men and additional supplies, and cleared for New-York. With those she sailed a second time to Cuba, and succeeded in landing all in safety.

The Spaniards were not on the alert, because she was not expected. The fact of her landing has since been confirmed by official sources.

After making the second trip the Upton returned directly to New-York, where she arrived yesterday afternoon. The second landing was made at a different part of the coast. Until the vessel arrived at this port the officers knew nothing of the fate of the men and ammunition of the first expedition. During the two trips to the coast of Cuba and back, and passage to this port, she carried the American flag.

A TERRIFIC STORM.

The hot-house of Mr. BOMBAY, near the city, was almost entirely destroyed. It will require twenty-eight boxes of glass to reconstruct it.

The storm was much heavier to the northward, and its effects were visible in the early part of the evening, cooling the atmosphere, which has been exceedingly hot and oppressive during the day.

CHEYENNE, Wyoming, June 20.—It is reported from Fort Laramie that there are now at that post 129 lodges of SIOUX, and more of them are daily arriving. It is expected that by the last of this week 1,000 lodges will be present. Those who have arrived are impatient to hear from RED CLOUD and think something has gone wrong. They are anxious to trade, but are very independent and sassy, and won't allow any white men to cross the Platte to their camps.

Condition of the Arizona Indians—Letter from Gen. Stevenson.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Brevet Major-Gen. STEVENSON, writing to Adjt.-Gen. TOWNSEND, from the head-quarters of the Department of Arizona, temporarily at Desoun Barracks, June 3, says:

"The Indians, during the past four months, have been comparatively quiet, and will very likely remain so until the crops are harvested and their roots gathered. They will rarely be entirely harmless until they suffer the fate of all the aboriginals that come in contact with the whites, particularly those without tribal organization, such as the Mohaves, Hualapis Coyoteros, Tontos and others of the Territory, and the Apaches that inhabit the Territory of Arizona and live on its borders. The Panas and Maricopas are, as formerly, upon the most friendly terms with the whites, but they are somewhat dissatisfied at the encroachments of settlers upon their reservation, and the large numbers of cattle that have been and are now being driven through their land, destroying the grass and their crops. They have not much confidence in or respect for their agent, with whom, I understand, they are not on the best of terms. He is, no doubt, a very worthy young officer, but too much inclined to introduce military discipline in his intercourse with them."

BOSTON, June 20.—Gov. CLAFLIN's veto of the Boston, Hartford and Erie Aid bill was generally anticipated, as was its effect on the bonds and stock. At the second Board, today, new seven per cent. bonds were quoted at 81¼ and the stock at 48¾. The Governor, in his veto, says:

"It does not comport with the dignity or the interest of the Commonwealth to maintain a relation conferred in this bill with an organization which has shown itself so incompetent and unfaithful to its trusts."

It is rumored that a new bill will be presented to-morrow.

BOSTON, June 20.—The only son of BENJAMIN M. The second trot was for all horses, for a purse of $2,000. There were five entries. Lady Thorn and Mountain Boy were drawn, not being in condition for the contest. The first, second and fourth heats were won by Goldsmith Maid, and the third by George Palmer. American Girl was last in each heat, but was given the second position in the second heat on account of George Palmer running. The fourth heat was trotted during a severe rain and hail-storm, which rendered the track soft. On reaching the last quarter George Palmer had a lead of three lengths on Goldsmith Maid, but broke badly and came home a neck behind the Maid. The following is a summary:

Goldsmith Maid	1	1	1	1
George Palmer	2	2	2	2
American Girl	3	3	3	3

The attendance throughout the meeting has been fair.

THE WEST.

WASHINGTON.

The Tax and Tariff Bill Reported—The Senate Still Fluttering Over the Franking Question—Mr. Akerman's Nomination—Important Bills Passed in the House—The Indian Appropriations—Miscellaneous.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—The Senate Finance Committee reported the Tax and Tariff bill today. A full synopsis of their amendments will be found elsewhere. The income tax stands as fixed by the House, while the entire list of special taxes, save those on brewers and liquor-dealers, are repealed. This adds some six millions to the reduction proposed in the House bill. The article of bituminous coal is added to the tariff section of the bill at fifty cents per ton, instead of $1.25, the existing rate. Mr. SHERMAN stated that he should endeavor to call the bill up on Wednesday.

THE SENATE AND THE FRANKING BILL.

Mr. CONKLING administered a deserved rebuke today to Mr. SUMNER and a few other Senators who are endeavoring to defeat the passage of the bill abolishing the franking privilege by prolonged and unnecessary debate, and the offering of amendments not germane to the proposition. He criticised, in his caustic manner, the want of courage exhibited by the Senate in meeting this question squarely; and reminded the Senate that the protesters that they desired to couple other reforms with this measure would deserve nobody. But the Senate went on talking all the same and no result was reached. Senator SUMNER's propositions to reduce letter postage to one cent was voted down by 19 to 29. NYE's motion to make it two cents was negatived by 20 to 30; and an amendment to allow newspapers sent from the office of publication to pass free, received 20 yeas to 30 nays. It was finally agreed that the clause abolishing franking should not take effect until Oct. 1, and the subject went over till to-morrow.

THE ALASKA SEAL FISHERIES.

The Fur-Seal bill has been before the House several times, and will probably come up again this week. The season for the prosecution of seal hunting has already passed, and one year's revenue from the sale of or the license to collect skins has been lost. While Congress has been disputing about the terms of the monopoly asked, valuable seal rookeries have been discovered in Behring Sea, outside the line of the United States possessions. The Aleutian Peninsula, upon which the fur seals are so numerous, were known not to be the only ones where those animals could be found, and the diligent search which has been prosecuted has at last been rewarded by discovery of seal rookeries to the north-west; and the Alaska property, which Congress has failed as yet to lease, has been depreciated in value.

MR. AKERMAN.

The name of the new Attorney-General is AKERMAN not ACKERMAN, as none of the papers print it. It is pronounced with the long sound of the vowel. No action has yet been taken on confirmation; but there is no foundation for the statements so vigorously circulated that his name is to be withdrawn. The views of Mr. AKERMAN, on sundry grave constitutional questions, expressed a year ago, will be made public in a day or two, which will give Republicans much satisfaction.

THE DAY'S WORK IN THE HOUSE.

The House did a good day's work today. During the morning hour it passed the bill, almost without objection, to pave Pennsylvania-avenue, charging the expense to the property-holders, the Government included. This is right, and will soon relieve the Capitol from one of its chief reproaches. Then the House took up the Army Fortification bill, and after an hour's debate passed it. The bill appropriates $1,500,000 for the continuation of the work on existing fortifications. Then the House took up the Army Appropriation bill for the support of the army for the next fiscal year, which appropriates $22,000,000, and passed it without debate. This was an unlooked-for result, as the last bill of this kind was debated for five days. The discussion on the Army Reduction bill, however, had absorbed all the argument on questions which hitherto have come up in connection with army appropriations. There remains now but one appropriation bill to be acted on originally by the House—the Sundry Civil or Miscellaneous bill. There is no doubt of the ability of the House to adjourn on the 15th of July, though the Senate is considerably behind.

THE SOLDIER'S ASYLUM INVESTIGATION.

The House Military Committee met today to commence the investigation into the affairs of the Trustees of the National Soldier's Asylum, in compliance with Gen. FARNSWORTH's resolution. Gen. LOGAN expressed his wish, in view of his relations toward Gen. BUTLER, to have nothing to do with the investigation. It was accordingly intrusted to a Subcommittee, composed of Gens. BEGLEY, STOUGHTON and SLOCUM, who will summon witnesses and begin work at once. Gen. BUTLER, who was present, volunteered the remark that he had had the business of the Trustees conducted expressly with a view to be prepared for such an investigation. He said they had no salaried officers, except a clerk to the President of the Board at $1,800 a year; that they were caring for 1,800 soldiers, and had property and buildings which they could sell at any time for a third more than they cost; and added that he should like to see the managers of any other public institution make such a showing.

THE INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

The very serious differences between the House and Senate upon the principle involved in the Indian Appropriation bill appears to be much more difficult to reconcile than last session, when, after much trouble, a compromise was patched up. Each House seems now determined to adhere to its own view; and the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, who has been giving the matter serious attention, fears that the Conference Committee, to which the bill must shortly go, will utterly fail to agree. The disagreement turns mainly upon the appropriations necessary to carry out the treaties negotiated by the Peace Commission organized and appointed by act of Congress, but which the House now seems determined to repudiate, together with the whole treaty system. Commissioner FARNSWORTH, who is at the Capitol every day to urge the importance of not allowing the bill to fail, says the Bureau is feeding sometimes as high as 20,000 wild Indians, who would commence depredations and involve the country in a general war within ten days after the 1st of July, if through the failure to make appropriations their supplies should be cut off.

AMENDMENTS OF RAILROAD CHARTERS.

Mr. HOWARD reported to the Senate today, from the Pacific Railroad Committee, a joint resolution intended to restrict applications for the amendment of railroad charters. It prohibits the reception of petitions for the amendment of charters to railroad companies on which public lands have been granted, unless they set forth the precise alteration which is desired, and are signed by the President of the Company, nor unless publication of the change which it is proposed to ask has been made in newspapers adjacent to the business head-quarters of the Company, at least thirty days previous to the opening of the session at which the petition is presented.

NEW-MEXICO AS A STATE.

Gen. CULLOM, from the Committee on Territories, today reported a bill to enable New-Mexico to form a Constitution and apply for admission as a State under the name of Lincoln. Mr. CULLOM intends to further carry out his idea of Territorial nomenclature by submitting a bill to organize the Indian Territory, and change its name to Douglas, as a sort of compliment to the Douglas wing of the Republican Party. It is argued that the precedent already set in naming a future State after WASHINGTON can be most appropriately continued in these two cases.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

THE PRESS AND THE CENSUS.

The following circular letter has been issued from the United States Census Office to United States Marshals:

This will not be considered as causing any departure from the rule laid down in instructions, that the enumeration in all the personal aspects of the census shall be strictly confidential.

MEXICAN CLAIMS.

The American and Mexican Claims Commission met today and extended the time for allowing claims to and including the 30th inst., and for filing memorials and proofs to Jan. 1, 1871.

THE CASE OF JUDGE DUVAL.

Charges having recently appeared against Judge DUVAL, of Texas, Messrs. PARCHAL, A. J. HAMILTON, and R. N. LANE, of that State, in a card published this afternoon, say it is utterly untrue that from the time that State seceded up to the time of his coming North, DUVAL acted as a District Judge under the so-called Confederate Government, and drew his pay from the treasury of that concern. They also explain the circumstances under which DUVAL came North in 1863. Satisfactory statements were at that time made to President LINCOLN and his Cabinet, when DUVAL received his pay from the Federal Treasury, after taking the iron-clad oath, and returned to Texas with the expedition of Gen. BANKS in the Fall of that year.

THE TAX AND TARIFF BILL.

Condition of the Bill as Reported to the Senate—Alterations and Modifications by the Senate Committee.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—The following are the amendments proposed by the Committee of Finance to the House bill for the reduction of taxation and for other purposes:

SPECIAL TAXES.

They strike out the first eleven sections of the bill, being all those which provide for the retention of various special taxes, including the tax on bankers, rectifiers, brokers in liquors, jewelers, manufacturers of gold and silver, and dealers in leaf tobacco, and in their stead provide for the repeal of all special taxes wherever, when and after May 1, 1871, with the exception of the special taxes imposed and the tax on distilled spirits and tobacco, and the tax on gross receipts of railroad companies, and they also provide for the repeal on and after the 1st of next October, of the several taxes on sales imposed by existing laws, and on such as are paid by stamps, they provide that the stamps issued for the current year shall be valid for the purpose of delivery of domestic liquors, distilled spirits and wines. It also repeals the taxes on artificial manure in Schedule A, the special taxes on brewers, and gross receipts, and repeals the tax on parks, and gross receipts, and repeals the tax on sales on the first of next October.

STAMP TAXES.

The Committee also proposed to strike out all the sections of the House bill relating to stamps, thereby leaving in full force the provisions of the existing laws relating to stamps, with the exception that the stamp taxes on promissory notes for a sum more than $100, and on receipts for any sum of money, and on canned and preserved fish, were to be repealed on and after the first of next October, and no stamp shall be required upon the transfer of any bond, note, mortgage, security or any chattel, or upon transfers of or assignment as collateral security. The bill fixes the schedule of notes to be allowed purchasers of property, stamps, bonds, and other evidences of debt, and provides also that matches, cigar-lights and wax tapers may be removed from the place of manufacture without payment of tax or affixing stamps thereto, under such regulations as the Department may prescribe.

INCOME.

The sections of the House bill relating to the income tax are not altered in any material particulars, except that the Committee have provided for a limited deduction on account of house rent to $500. The income tax, therefore, remains, as fixed by the House, at three per cent., with an exemption of $1,000.

DIVIDENDS.

The Committee report in favor of striking out the provisions of the House bill requiring manufacturers, miners, and gas companies to pay a tax of one per cent. on dividends, but leave the other provisions relative to corporations unaltered.

ADMINISTRATIVE REFORM.

An additional section authorizes the President to consolidate two or more collection districts, retaining one Collector and one Assessor, and such consolidation can be effected without detriment to the public interest.

THE TARIFF.

The provisions of the House bill in regard to tariff duties are changed in the following particulars:

POLITICS IN SOUTH CAROLINA.

Convention of the Union Reform Party—The Platform Adopted—Nominations of Judge Carpenter for Governor—Efforts to Find a Colored Candidate for Lieutenant-Governor—Personnel of the Convention—Prospect of a Lively Campaign.

From Our Own Correspondent.

COLUMBIA, Friday, June 17, 1870.

The State Convention of the political movement known as the United Reform Party was held here on the 14th and 15th inst. The time and scope of the movement may be gathered from the platform adopted yesterday. The platform was prepared by a Committee appointed by the Convention for that special purpose, of which the Chairman was Major-Gen. M. C. BUTLER, a distinguished cavalry officer in the Confederate service.

THE PLATFORM.

The platform is as follows:

"This Convention, representing citizens of South Carolina, irrespective of party, assembled to organize the good people of the State in an effort to reform the present incompetent, extravagant, prodigious and corrupt administration of the State Government, and to establish instead thereof just and equal laws, order and harmony, economy in public expenditures, a strict accountability of office-holders, and the election to office only of men of known honesty and integrity, doth declare and announce the following principles upon which men of all parties may unite for the purposes aforesaid:

1. The Fifteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States having been, by the proper authorities, promulgated, published, accepted and acquiesced in as law in all the States of the Union, ought to be fairly administered and faithfully obeyed as fundamental law.

2. The vast changes in our system of Government wrought by the international War between the two sections of the States, and following in its train, and so far impossible to undo, the institutions and laws of the United States of the United States as to require that they be regarded as accomplished facts, having the force and obligation of law.

3. This solemn and complete recognition of the existing laws, brings the people of South Carolina in entire harmony upon all questions of civil and political rights, and invites all honest men in an earnest and determined effort to establish a just, equal and faithful administration of the Government, for the interest of no class or clique, but for the benefit of a united people."

The President of the Convention was WILLIAM M. SHANDON, of Kershaw County, a lawyer not hitherto much known in politics. The Convention consisted of representatives from twenty-two out of thirty-one counties in the State; the mountain counties not taking special interest in the movement. The delegates numbered probably 150, of whom probably thirty were negroes.

THE GUBERNATORIAL CANDIDATES.

Besides the adoption of the platform above, the most important step taken by the Convention was the nomination of this party's candidates for Governor and Lieutenant-Governor at the October elections. There were but two names put in nomination before the Convention—that of Judge R. B. CARPENTER, a native of Kentucky, a Republican, and now a Circuit Judge of this State; and that of Judge GEORGE S. BRYAN, a native of this State, a Republican, and a Judge in the District Court of the United States. The voting was done by counties, each county giving as many votes as it has members in the Lower House of the General Assembly. The first ballot resulted in the choice of Judge CARPENTER by a vote of 77½ against 4 for Judge BRYAN. Accordingly, Judge CARPENTER is the Union Reform Party's candidate for Governor in the coming campaign. It is expected that Gov. SCOTT will be put in nomination by his wing of the party; but no nomination has yet been made by that wing.

LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR.

The Convention next proceeded to nominate a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor. It was desirable on all hands to have a colored man for this place, but none could be found. Gen. KANSHAW desired the nomination of P. L. CAMPBELL, the colored Secretary of State, but it was understood that he would probably decline, and hence was not put in nomination. A. A. HARPER, colored, nominated Wm. E. MARSHALL, colored, but he declined. G. W. MELTON, white, nominated Rev. JONAS BIRD, colored, who also declined. The most amicable spirit of co-operation between the two races prevailed. A number of other names were brought forward, but were all withdrawn. The first name presented, that of M. C. BUTLER, white, was accepted, although many thought his prominence as a Confederate soldier might render him less acceptable to a portion of the voters of the State. That which counterbalanced this fear and turned the scale in his favor was the extremely liberal view taken by him in politics. One of the most telling speeches before this Convention was his; and his influence as a harmonizer between the races is known to be very great. Judge CARPENTER is said to be the best stump orator that the South has known since S. S. PRENTISS and the campaign is expected to be made lively at least by his skill and ability that way.

THE PERSONNEL OF THE CONVENTION.

The Convention, before adjourning, yesterday passed a resolution authorizing the Chairman to appoint, at his leisure, a committee of thirteen, which is to be the Executive Committee of the campaign, and which is to issue an address to the people of the State. The personnel of this Convention was not identical with that of former Conventions of our people. Many of the faces and names were new, and there seemed a marked absence of old party leaders. The peaceable and harmonious co-working of negroes with native whites have never been found in similar bodies before. Many of the speeches of the colored members were quite as progressive and as broad as those of the whites. BOIRE.

AMOS T. AKERMAN.

How His Appointment as Attorney-General is Received in Georgia.

From the Atlanta New Era, June 11.

The nomination of Hon. AMOS T. AKERMAN to the position of United States Attorney, as announced by our dispatches this morning, meets the approbation of the Republican Party in this State, and is a fitting tribute to the merits of that gentleman as a jurist and as a man. It is also a timely recognition of his services as a firm and undoubted Southern Republican who has given much of his time and talents to the cause of reconstruction in Georgia. Mr. AKERMAN has been closely identified with the Republican Party in this State from the day of its formation to the organization of the local State Government. He was a member of the Constitutional Convention under the Reconstruction acts; supported Gov. BULLOCK's election; was Presidential elector at large on the Grant ticket with Senator FARROW; supported the organization of the Legislature under the act of December last; and though a personal friend of Mr. HILL, has never allowed himself to be drawn into any position of antagonism to the Republican Party in this State. He stands well with his party, and commands the respect and confidence of all men, regardless of party, who know him personally. We therefore congratulate the Republicans in Georgia upon his nomination to this honorable position as Cabinet Minister at Washington.

The fact that Mr. AKERMAN has been so closely allied with the fortunes of the Republican organization in this State, is in itself a sufficient guarantee of the indorsement by the President of the party of which he is and has been a leader; and this indorsement is all the more satisfactory and gratifying in view of the fact that the Chairman of our State Central Executive Committee, Hon. FOSTER BLODGETT, is now in Washington, and was consulted in this fitting recognition of the claims of the party in Georgia.

There is much to cheer the Republicans of our State in this morning's news. The appointment of one of our Radical Republican leaders to the high Cabinet office of Attorney-General of the United States, and the action of the Reconstruction Committee in overruling the decision of the Committee, made when several of the members were absent, by striking out the Bingham proviso, will be very satisfactory to our party friends, and very discouraging to the Bryant wing of the Democracy.

Dr. Lanahan and Mr. Goodenough.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

We observe in your paper of Saturday last a communication from the attorneys of Mr. SAMUEL J. GOODENOUGH, relative to his suit against our client, Rev. Dr. LANAHAN, growing out of the charges preferred against Mr. GOODENOUGH for misconduct in business of the Methodist Book Concern. We should not notice the letter but for the apparent effort in it to convey the impression that Mr. GOODENOUGH is yet connected with and in some way the representative of the Book Concern. Mr. GOODENOUGH has not been employed in the Book Concern since June, 1869, and yet the letter states "that this institution will be happy to afford him (Dr. LANAHAN) all reasonable facilities in any effort he may make in the investigation of facts relating to this matter in preparing for the trial." And in another part of the letter it is said: "The process we are authorized to make for the plaintiff and officers of said Concern." The form in which this statement is put forth by Mr. GOODENOUGH's attorneys would seem to indicate that the prosecution is instigated by some person, who claims to exercise control in the affairs of the Book Concern, and at the same time carry out previous his connection with the litigation. The only officers of the institution in charge of its affairs are Rev. Drs. CARLTON and LANAHAN.

We are willing that the plaintiff's attorneys should deem the present the "proper time to amend the complaint" so as to enlarge the scope of damages which Dr. LANAHAN will be called upon to justify, and hold them to their promise not to offer them objections on the ground of their relation to certain charges of fraud or illegality in any statement of the Book Concern, should the defendant attempt to justify his allegations." We thank Mr. GOODENOUGH's attorneys for the work on his hands to look after this law suit so far as it holds his own conduct in connection with the Book Concern, and he is quite welcome to be the champion of his threatened "actions to be brought in other quarters."

CURRENT NOTES.

Next Friday is Class Day at Harvard College.

The San Francisco Alta alludes to "the general drift of gab which flows from our National Congress."

A. W. CAMPBELL, of Wheeling, West Va., says he is not a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor, nor for any public position whatever.

A man in Terre Haute, Ind., has obtained a divorce because his wife swore at him so terribly. He says a wife may be a blessing, but his wasn't the kind he wanted.

Speaking of Canada and the United States, the Ogdensburg Journal inquires if what was termed in the bond reciprocity has been changed to retaliation. This is a suggestive conundrum.

Cincinnati now wishes to have a National Convention of manufacturers and inventors at the same time with the Industrial Exposition in that city next September.

DOREMUS gives the inmates of the New-Hampshire State Prison a strawberry feast on St. John's Day. He still remembers these in kindness toward with them.

At a meeting of the Canal Board, held on the 16th inst., it was decided that the so-called "Black River awards" were never legally made, and that these claims shall be sent back to the Canal Appraisers for rehearing.

The San Francisco Alta calls for an exploring expedition to Northern Bolivia, if the policy of looking out for new channels of commerce and for new sources of wealth is to be maintained.

A little school-boy in Danvers, Mass., when asked by his teacher why women should not vote, answered: "Cause they are afraid of caterpillars." Well, some of our politicians do resemble caterpillars in one respect.

The Portland (Me.) Press says that the country cannot afford to lose the services of Special Commissioner WELLS before our finances are thoroughly regulated and restored; that we might as well think of getting along without coupons as without the Commissioner.

The Boston Transcript says that the two-fold principle that should guide national legislation is plain enough, and that is, to provide with equal steps for the payment of a fair proportion of the public debt and the removal of taxation.

The Cleveland Herald insists that the adage about the early bird catching the worm has done a world of mischief; that it serves who intended to apply to any animal that did not eat its food raw. Suppose the early risers—most—confine themselves to oysters?

Southern papers notice that, whereas in times past Southern people paid little attention to the rag business, and thought it rather humiliating to hoard their rags and bring them to market, since the war the business has become rather a feature there.

A Connecticut paper reports that a town clerk in that State has been accustomed to sign marriage certificates in blank and to give them to a certain clergyman, (who, as is naively remarked, "does much marrying,") to be filled out and used at his discretion.

The latest "sweet pretty" thing we have seen is this: "As the season violet betrays itself by its odor, so will love, however carefully concealed, discover itself by impalpable emanations from the heart that forms its arbor." The "arbor" part is especially fine—and appropriate.

A Maine woman, impressed with the idea that she should die suddenly and immediately, called upon a neighbor a few days ago, and asked as an special favor that she would cut out and make for her a shroud, as "she was just about her size."

The South Carolina Democratic papers are very much pleased with the results of the recent Union Reform State Convention, including the nominations of Judge CARPENTER and Gen. BUTLER for Governor and Lieutenant-Governor. The latter was selected at the instance of the colored delegates, it is said.

While religious services were being held in a Presbyterian Church in Pittsburg, Penn., on Friday evening, a lady, a well-known member of the congregation, was seen to fall back in her pew, apparently in a fainting condition. She was at once removed to the vestibule, but died almost immediately.

One of the officers of a steamer at Savannah, Ga., recently had some difficulty with a deck hand, and to save his own life knocked the man overboard. The man could not swim, and was on the point of drowning, when the officer jumped in and rescued him. The officer's friends complimented him on having two lives that day.

A Savannah paper reports that "a very extensive loggerhead turtle," weighing 200 pounds, has been sent thence to New-York, and adds that, "as a soup-turtle it is superior to the green or the more delicate soft-shell variety, having the combined flavor of sturgeon and alligator, besides being more extensive in its make-up than others of its class."

A kind-hearted Bostonian slipped a $10 bill into the hand of a bereaved lady, whose husband, his friend, had just died leaving her not much of this world's goods. And the kind-hearted Bostonian, as we soon learned, thereby greatly contributed to the bereaved widow's comfort, for therewith she was able to buy "a love of a curl" to wear beneath her widow's cap at the funeral.

The Democratic papers in Florida are sending up a long and prolonged howl together over the reported fact that the Governor has issued three millions of State 8 per cent gold bearing bonds to Gen. M. S. LITTLEFIELD, representing the Florida Central and the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Companies, in exchange for bonds of a similar amount of those corporations.

Mr. DAVID A. DANGLER has written a letter, full of polysyllables, accepting the working men's nomination for Congress in the Cleveland (Ohio) District, the letter being designed, as he says, to prevent any incertitude as regards his views respecting the recent action of the Labor Union, and to convey his acceptance in form more tangible than the emphatic assurances which, through a delegation from that body, he deemed to give expression to.

The Indianapolis Journal forcibly opposes any revision of the Bible, and says that "so much of the religion of the world in these days and always is made up of memories rather than convictions, of tender associations with God's word than living application, that nothing might be gained by a change which should break up associations and remit four-fifths of those we are in the habit of calling Christians to their convictions."

The first telegrams gave undue importance to the split among the Republicans of the Tenth Congressional District of Indiana. The Convention from which 300 "delegates" withdrew in favor of Gen. HASCALL, as an independent candidate against Mr. WILLIAMS, was a Mass Convention, and 2,000 persons were in attendance upon it. Gen. HASCALL received only three votes on the regular ballot, and said WILLIAMS, two-thirds elected in a majority in the district. The direction of so small a number can give the premium of his defeat.

A member of a highly respectable and influential family in New-Orleans, who is passing a six months' sojourn in the parish prison, has written a note to the Judge who sentenced him, in which he cautiously admits that after thirty days' experience he cannot in candor appreciate the Judge's taste in this instance in having selected for him, during these warm and sultry days, such an uncongenial and dry retreat. He admits, however, that six months in the establishment will not in any manner make him six months older—"just the reverse, for during that time will I," he continues, "endeavor the rejuvenating process by which Phœnix-like, will I come more upward upon the wings of youthfulness, by presenting to an astonished community the old disciplinated form arrayed in the bloom and strength of youth."

BASE-BALL.

The Departure of the Red Stockings—A Lively Ball Game with the Newark Amateur Club.

The Red Stockings took their departure from this City yesterday in the 4 P. M. train for Newark, where they were engaged to play the young and gentlemanly players of the Amateur Club of that city at the Waverley Fair Grounds. The weather was very favorable for play, the clouds obscuring the sun, and rendering the heat less oppressive. Neither BRAINARD nor ALLISON played in the match, DEAN and ATWATER taking their places. The Amateurs presented a lively chaste ball, and put in a slow pitcher, who supposed that twisting the ball would bother the batsmen of the Red Stocking nine. They opened well with a score of 22 runs off the slows in the first two innings, and the Amateurs tried a swift pitcher, and they hit him away for 8, and at the close of the seventh the Amateurs gave up the contest, they having scored but two runs, and one of these was a "let me" for BARNY WRIGHT by his brothers in the Red Stocking nine. At 3½ P. M. the Red Stockings left for Philadelphia, where they are engaged to play the Athletics on Wednesday next. We give the score of the game below:

Defeat of the Champion Atlantics—The Athletics Still Champions.

On May 30, the Atlantic Club, of Brooklyn, went to Philadelphia to play the first of a regular series of contests for the championship, and they returned home beaten by a score of 15 to 12. Yesterday the Atlantics came on here to play the return game, and after a short contest they returned last night the victors by the remarkable score of 19 to 3. The Times stated that the game of yesterday was simply a practice match, the statement being based on the fact that it was so announced on the bulletin board of the Atlantic Club-house. In order to ascertain the true facts of the case, our reporter visited the Athletics, at the Merchants' Hotel, yesterday morning, shortly after their arrival in town, and learned from the President of the Athletic Club and their directors that the game was the return of a regular series, and that no practice game was thought of. They claim to have written documents to that effect, and that it is for championship unmistakably, and goes to Philadelphia, where it unmistakably belongs. The game was a close one from the start, for though no mistakes were made in the field the batting of the Atlantics was remarkable for its weakness. The Times, as stated on the 17th yesterday, that the friends of the Club, if taken up all the bets offered on the success of the Atlantics, would seem to prove pretty plainly that the game was simply one of the betting friends which have of late years so disgraced the professional class of ball players. Bets were made to be capable of proof, that the Atlantic Club had a nine which, for every respectable ball-field, and expelled from the National Association. Something is wrong somewhere, for it is nonsense to suppose that a nine which played such a game with the Red Stockings last Tuesday could so fairly beaten by any club in the country. But without further comment, we leave the full score below to tell the rest of this sad tale:

The Suit Against the Bark Emily—An Old Collision Case.

In an action commenced against the bark Emily for damages sustained by the pilot-boat Abraham Lappel, which was injured in a collision with the first-named vessel about two years ago, a decree was ordered for the claimants, with reference to assess damages. The Commissioner who was appointed before reported $400 as damages and $400 as demurrage, but exception was taken to the amount of demurrage as excessive. The motion against allowing the demurrage was argued before Judge BLATCHFORD on the 11th inst. The latter decided, yesterday, that the regular earnings of the vessel should fix the amount of demurrage, which would be all she would be entitled to recover. He reduced the amount of demurrage to $50. CHARLES DONAHUE appeared for the libelant and W. Q. MORTON for the claimants.

Two Policemen Charged with Robbery.

TREADWELL W. REMSEN and JAMES HANNEGAN were indicted and tried in December last, before Recorder HACKETT, for grand larceny in stealing from the pocket of an old gentleman named WELLS, on the night of Dec. 22, 1869, a wallet containing $187, and of the offence so charged the jury found a verdict of guilty. One of the reasons why this case has appeared prominently before the public is that both the prisoners were at the time connected with the Police force of this City. From the statement of Mr. WELLS it would appear that not only were the prisoners guilty of larceny but of highway robbery. The counsel for the prisoners, Mr. S. H. STUART, took an appeal to the General Term of the Supreme Court on the questions of law raised, and that appeal was argued yesterday. The Court reserved its decision.

The Consul for Guatemala Heavily Mulcted for Frauds on the Revenue.

District-Attorney PIERREPONT received a letter from Collector GRINNELL, a few days ago, requesting that a suit might be brought against FELIX MIRANDA, the Consul for Guatemala at this port, in the United States District Court, for the recovery of $21,849 51, in gold, the value of certain importations of tobacco fraudulently entered at the Custom-house by the defendant in violation of section 1 of the act of March 2, 1867. A decree was issued by Judge BLATCHFORD, yesterday, ordering the amount to be paid. The order of distribution will be issued today. The name of the informer has not yet been ascertained. MIRANDA was arrested a short time ago on a charge of having been implicated with HENDER WOLFF and M. MAY in conspiring to defraud the Government by means of false invoices, but was subsequently discharged.

The sale was made in behalf of Mrs. RICHARDSON in her capacity of special guardian for the children of ALBERT D. RICHARDSON.

THE QUARANTINE TROUBLES.

Meeting of Merchants and Statement of their Grievances.

A Proposition to Appeal to the Law—Improvement Commissioner Shaughnessy.

Yesterday afternoon an important meeting of merchants connected with the coffee, sugar and shipping interest was held at the office of WILLIAM Sloane & Son, No. 131 Washington, for the purpose of taking some united action with reference to the late and existing difficulties at Quarantine. Mr. WILLIAM E. RUSSELL presided, and briefly stated the object of the meeting, which was to present their grievances in a proper form to the Commissioners of Quarantine, in their capacity as a Board of Appeal.

Mr. TURNBULL moved that a committee of three be appointed, who should be empowered to take what action was necessary.

Mr. HUNTINGTON stated that the committee should be authorized to be appointed by the Chair, and then they could consult and collect the facts sufficient from the sugar, coffee, and other interests represented. He said this matter had come to be one of vital importance to the City of New-York; the grievance was of many years' standing, and then it was carried to such an extent that it was serious enough, but now the burdens had been doubled and quadrupled. This was the first season that coffee and hides detained beyond twenty-four hours or so for examination. Vessels have arrived here in forty days from Rio, with sickness on board, and lodes with one of the most distinguished known. These vessels were then ordered to be discharged at Quarantine. Such a course is not to be tolerated. It is not to be avoided. The cargoes come here in a moist condition, and the hides, and wines, and coffee, and sugar, separate the good from the bad. The bags are all frail, and must be handled with care. It would be impossible to lighter them by inexperienced hands so that the good would not be mixed with the bad, and by the time the coffee reaches the storehouse it would be in such a condition as to deteriorate the value greatly. The speaker said he would not have had coffee lightered at Quarantine, if he could help it, under any circumstances. Today there were five vessels at Quarantine which had had no sickness on board from Rio here. They have been from forty to fifty days on the passage.

A gentleman inquired "if those vessels brought clean bills of health; if not the Health Officer would not admit them."

The speaker in reply read a letter from the Captain of the Lord Dalhousie, which had had yellow fever on board, just before leaving port all were well. There had been no sickness since March 31. She sailed May 1, and arrived here June 4. A letter was also read from the master of the bark Campanella, which left Rio May 4, and arrived here June 13. She had had no sickness on board, and it was alleged that there was no reason for her detention by the Health Officer.

Mr. HUNTINGTON stated that from the statement of these masters, there could be no reason for the detention of those vessels at Quarantine, and no one could say that there was. He hoped the Committee would take the matter in charge, and provide means for legal measures to correct this evil. He had read the Quarantine laws, and could discover no warrant for detaining vessels arriving under clean bills of health. He would take legal measures to hold somebody responsible for these illegal detentions. He did not believe the State had yet an autocrat to dictate to merchants of this City.

Another gentleman remarked that this course was working great injury to the City. It had two causes of action, both of which will go to Baltimore instead of New-York. He had seen instances of vessels put up here to be lightered in order to avoid their detention at the Quarantine, which belonged to this house, and the case of SIMMS on her VOYAGE, yet she was detained below.

Mr. BURNHAM wanted to know what course the Quarantine Commissioners, Mr. J. A. TOBIN and Mr. J. A. DUNCAN, pursued in regard to the matter. The speaker said he had gone up to the City, and she was, therefore, directed to be discharged at the outside of Atlantic Dock, (TOBIN's stores,) and the Captain was ordered to report daily to the Health Officer for pratique. The ship discharged at Fassaroux' stores, instead of Atlantic Dock, and for the violation of the Quarantine regulations, the Health Officer attempted to seize her, but was resisted successfully by the Health Officer at Brooklyn. The Brooklyn Board of Health have taken such action since that affair as will prevent vessels landing at any point in Brooklyn, and the speaker concluded by stating that the responsibility for such action must remain on them and not on him.

Dr. MOSMAN stated that there were at present but three ports which were considered infected, Havana, Port-au-Prince and Rio Janeiro. Vessels coming from those ports were detained in the Lower Bay for examination and vaccination, and then sent to the Upper Bay, (Robbin's reef,) when their cargoes were discharged into lighters and sent to the City. The vessels were then cleansed and fumigated, and discharged from further inconvenience. The interview with the Health Officer, Dr. DUNCAN, was quite protracted, and in the course of it the Quarantine regulations were fully explained; also the reasons and law which govern the Health Officer's action. These gentlemen, by reference to the books, showed that Rio Janeiro had been infected with yellow fever since early in May. The bark Falco, which left Rio, May 26, with a cargo of coffee, had two deaths at that port. The bark Freedom arrived at this port June 1, with coffee, from Rio. The Captain and four men were in the hospital at that port, and one passenger died on the voyage with yellow fever. She is now in the Lower Bay, where her Captain desires a hearing, sailed the day after the last-named vessel. The Captain claimed that all were well, but from the fact that she came from an infected port the Health Officer felt it his duty to detain her, and he did so. Had it not been for the difficulty with the Brooklyn authorities the Maz would have gone up to TOBIN's stores. As it is she was put to a full time of pratique.

The steamer Denmark came soon after from Rio. All were well on board, but with the history of Rio before him, the Health Officer felt that he must require her to discharge in the Upper Bay after fumigation. She was so discharged and goes to sea on Wednesday. The bark Lucy Hallowell, from Rio, had five in the hospital at that port, and the Captain's son died of yellow fever. The bark Cassilone arrived about the same time from Rio. All were well on board, but it was thought best to keep her in the Lower Bay, and she is there still. The point with respect to the port of Rio is that it is infected; that vessels from there must be subjected to pratique; and that no fault can be found with the officers, for this is justified by the circumstances.

A gentleman stated that the reason why the people were so far in the Lower Bay was because the Governor, when it was noticed that rates were done, would direct that the lightering rates be reduced. Then, when there was no more money in the business, the merchants would be served at moderate rates.

A resolution was offered by Mr. KNOWLTON for this effect, that if the Health Officer refused to employ stevedores and lighterman as requested by the merchants will ask the Governor to dismiss the Health Officer for malfeasance.

A motion was made that the merchants contribute a sum sufficient to carry on the expenses of the proceedings. The Committee were appointed to procure a subscription. The understanding was that the Committee should consult all other magazines before proceeding to the last resort.

In the course of the discussion Mr. RAMSAY stated that he had some sugar by the Morro Castle, which he asked should be discharged by bonded lighters. The Health Officer refused to deliver the goods to any but the Quarantine lighters. The consequence was that sugars consigned to other parties have come up, while his (Mr. RAMSAY's) are still on board the steamer.

The principal houses represented at the meeting were Moses Taylor & Co., Grinnell, Minturn & Co., Sturgis & Ivots, E. D. Morgan & Co., J. L. Phipps & Co., Tryon Ramsay, J. K. Wolford & Co., Knowlton & Co., Dowley, Corners & Co., R. T. Beck & Co. The Committee consisted of Messrs. Royal Phelps, Solon Humphrey, Lawrence Turnure, W. R. Garrison and R. F. Brett.

The Health Officer's View of the Quarantine—Result of an Interview with the Quarantine Officer.

After the meeting of the merchants our reporter proceeded to Quarantine for the purpose of having an interview with Dr. CARNOCHAN, the Health Officer. That official was absent, but Drs. KENNEDY, BIRD and MOSMER were at the Quarantine office, and from them our reporter obtained the views entertained by the Health Officer regarding the matter in controversy. A communication was exhibited which Dr. CARNOCHAN intended to publish in the morning. The document relates the history of the trouble between himself and the Health Officer of Brooklyn. The doctor states that on the 7th inst., the bark Rough Diamond came in from Matanzas without a clean bill of health, and was detained at Quarantine. There was no sickness on board, but it was thought best to keep her there for a time. The vessel was then ordered up to the City, and she was, therefore, directed to be discharged at the outside of Atlantic Dock, (TOBIN's stores,) and the Captain was ordered to report daily to the Health Officer for pratique. Almost a Murder in Jersey City.

An attack was made at about 2 o'clock yesterday morning upon JOHN BADER, a grocer employed at Commonpaw, who was returning to his house. Three men accosted him, and demanded some money to buy liquor. When he refused, they assaulted him and stabbed him with a knife. BADER's cries brought four or five officers to the spot, and the assailants were arrested after a long chase and after several shots had been fired by the officers. They were taken to the Central Police Station, where they gave their names as JAMES RIDDER, HENRY BAUER and GOTTLIEB SCHNEIDER. They were committed for trial.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, yesterday, the bill to reduce taxation was reported from the Committee on Finance. A bill was introduced setting forth that all foreign telegraph companies doing business in the United States are subject to the provisions of the Internal Revenue laws, and requiring their enforcement as to future and past receipts of income. The House amendments to the bill authorizing the settlement of officers' accounts were concurred in, and, the morning hour expiring, the Post-office Appropriation bill was taken up, the question being on the amendment abolishing the franking privilege. Mr. SUMNER's proposition for cheap postage was voted down. An amendment providing for two cents postage was also rejected. Another was offered allowing each member of Congress $200 for postage, and was rejected. An amendment that the bill shall not take effect until Oct. 1, was agreed to. Without acting on any other amendment, the Senate took a recess. The evening session was devoted to the consideration of the Texas Pacific Railroad bill.

In the House a number of bills were introduced, among them one authorizing the President to open negotiations with the British North American Provinces for their admission as States of the Union, and one to annex the Republic of San Domingo. A resolution instructing the Ways and Means Committee to report a bill reducing the duty on potatoes, and all kinds of fish, fifty per cent., was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means. Permission was asked to offer a concurrent resolution for the appointment of a joint select committee on the subject of Cuba, but objection was made. Later in the session Mr. MAYNARD asked leave to offer a resolution declaring full concurrence in the President's Cuban message, but Mr. FOX and others objected, and it was withdrawn. A bill authorizing New-Mexico to organize as a State under the name of "Lincoln," was reported from the Committee on Territories, and was recommitted. A bill was reported and passed requiring national banks going into liquidation to retire their circulation. The Senate amendments to the Indian Appropriation bill were reported back to be considered on Thursday. The House went into Committee of the Whole on the Fortification bill, appropriating $1,944,760. A motion to strike out the enacting clause was voted down by 65 to 60. The bill was, after a long debate, reported to the House and passed. An effort was made to report back from the Committee on Public Lands the Senate bill granting lands to the Central Branch of the Union Pacific Railroad in Kansas, in order that it might be placed on the Speaker's table, but permission was not granted. The Army bill, appropriating $20,977,227, was taken up in Committee of the Whole; $40,000 was added for meteorological observations and $20,000 for shade trees in the Northern cemeteries, and the bill was reported and passed.

GENERAL.

An Havana dispatch says the steamer George B. Upton, on the 12th inst., made another landing on the coast of Cuba, putting ashore a party of twenty-two and Col. LOMO, and discharging her entire cargo, embracing 1,000 stand of arms, a French repeating cannon, and a large quantity of ammunition. A rumor that the Upton had gone ashore somewhere on the coast had caused the sending of a number of gunboats in search of her. The steam-ship Dacia has arrived at Porto Rico.

Advices from Fort Laramie represent that the Sioux are gathering in the vicinity, and will soon number a thousand lodges. They are impatient to hear from RED CLOUD and SPOTTED TAIL of something wrong, and, although anxious to trade, they are "independent and saucy," and rigidly exclude whites from the vicinity of their camp.

Gen. STARK and Col. SMITH, of Fenian fame, left Buffalo yesterday for Canandaigua, with their counsel, to answer the charges against them for violation of the laws of the United States.

An order has been issued from the War Department directing, for the purpose of diffusing instruction, that the lieutenants of the five artillery regiments shall serve in turn in the light batteries of their respective regiments not longer than two years at any one time.

The obsequies of JEROME NAPOLEON BONAPARTE took place yesterday in Baltimore. Among the pall-bearers were Hon. REVERDY JOHNSON, Hon. THOMAS SWANN, Gen. JOHN A. DIX and Commodore FERNANDO.

On Saturday night, in Louisville, Ky., four affrays occurred, the results of which were two young men killed and two wounded beyond recovery. The fatal affrays arose from insults offered to the mothers of the assailants. The same night, in Cleveland, Ohio, a young man died in ten minutes after he had been stabbed by a person who mistook him for another.

Mr. EUGENIUS LOVERING, a prominent merchant of Baltimore, died there yesterday, at the age of fifty-two years.

The stock and bond-holders of the Schuylkill Navigation Company, ratified the lease of the Canal and its franchises to the Reading Railroad Company.

Rev. B. H. NADAL, D. D., President of the Drew Theological Seminary, at Madison, N. J., died there suddenly at 6 o'clock yesterday morning.

A fire in Binghamton, on Sunday morning, destroyed several stores, involving a loss equal to $41,500. Eight business houses were burned in Windsor, Ill., on Sunday night, causing loss amounting to between $20,000 and $40,000. A brewery occupied by JOHN F. BERRY, in Philadelphia, was almost entirely destroyed by fire yesterday morning. The loss is $70,000.

A tannery in Northumberland, N. H., belonging to WEBSLOW & MITCHELL, was struck by lightning on Sunday and burned. The loss is $35,000.

Gov. CLAFLIN, of Massachusetts, yesterday vetoed the bill granting State aid to the Hartford and Erie Railroad, recently passed by the Legislature.

The delegates from the various temperance societies of this City met in Convention at Rev. Dr. MONTROSE'S Church, Twenty-third-street, yesterday, and adopted resolutions looking to the organization of a general association to act in conjunction with the State Temperance Society in furtherance of the Temperance reform. In the evening a public meeting was held in the same church, under the auspices of the Convention, at which several addresses were delivered.

A heavy hail and thunder-storm passed over portions of this State yesterday, causing considerable damage to fruit-trees and greenhouses. A Binghamton dispatch says the hailstones there were an inch in diameter; at Albany they are said to have weighed an ounce. At Rensselaer Bridge, a man was struck by lightning and probably fatally injured. In this City a meteoric stone fell in the Bowery. No one was injured. Previous to the storm it was exceedingly hot, and several cases of sun-stroke are reported.

A propeller ran down a small boat, on Saturday night, off Milton, on the Hudson River, shattering the boat to pieces. Two young women, ELMIRA MILLER and MELISSA BARTON, and a young man, JOHN ROWLEY, were drowned, and another young man was rescued. The steamer kept her course without offering assistance.

A meeting of merchants was held yesterday to take united action with a view to have the quarantine troubles adjusted by a resort to the law if necessary. The matter will first be presented to the Quarantine Commissioners on appeal from the decision of the Health Officer. That official claims that he has been justified in pursuing the course he has followed, and holds that he is acting for the best interests of the whole community.

Sectionalism as a Force in Politics.

"Wanted, a Western policy, because it is the only national policy!"—is the cry of the St. Louis Democrat. "We of the South need a policy which will protect our interests—interests which are identical with those of the West, and which will contribute most to the growth and prosperity of the whole country,"—is the response of the Nashville Union.

The South wooed the West once before. The secessionists in all their plans calculated upon Western sympathies and support. They argued that the interests of the two sections were so closely allied that they would be found side by side in national conflict. Events falsified that expectation. The West gave no heed to the mercantile logic of the cotton-growers when the integrity of the Union was in jeopardy.

That warning should not be forgotten by the South. For any purpose of resistance to Federal authority, or of opposition to a policy really national, the co-operation of the West is not available. It may grumble about Eastern legislation, may protest against Eastern monopolies, and may endeavor to circumvent the combinations of Eastern railroad managers; but it will do nothing in furtherance of designs which are intended to build up the political power of the South at the expense of the dignity or welfare of the nation. Slavery made the South essentially sectional. The West, on the contrary, is instinctively, intensely national. Its points of sectional divergence are few and weak compared with the interests and aspirations which bind its fortunes to those of the Republic.

There are, however, signs of a combination of Western and Southern influences which no prudent politician in the North or East will venture to disregard. Of this alliance the expansion clause in Mr. GARFIELD'S Currency bill is the first fruit. The two sections are brought together by a common grievance,—or rather by a common want, for which both prescribe the same remedy. They desire more currency and object to dependence on Eastern banks for its supply. Out of this came the demand for a redistribution of the national bank circulation, and out of this again the proposition which the House has most unwisely sanctioned. We cannot suppose that their concerted action will end here. The causes which impel the West to oppose high tariffs, to assail Pennsylvania monopolists, and to agitate for relief from taxation, operate with equal force in the Southern States. The alliance has, thus far, taken a less positive shape, simply because certain Southern members proved recreant to the industrial interests of their States; but the time is coming when the joint sectional representation which controlled Mr. GARFIELD will dictate terms to Mr. KELLEY.

It must be admitted that this union of sectional influences, for the purpose of molding the national policy, may lead to some legislative evils, and in the end perhaps to grave complications. The West in the growing power, and the temptation to its abuse which alliance with the South will afford, may prove too much for the average of political virtue. The only consolation is, that the instincts of the Western people may be relied upon to counteract sectional appeals which have not justice for their foundation. To keep the West in its true place,—to make sure of its influence as a support to national interests and feeling—it is necessary for the East to discard measures which have been framed for its special benefit, or in the administration of which it has managed to secure special advantages. The wisest concessions are those which are timely. But for a prolonged refusal to redistribute the national bank circulation with a proper regard for Western and Southern wants, we should not now have been brought face to face with the possibility of inflation. When reasonable concessions would have been accepted, they were withheld; and having been withheld too long, they are now to be extorted, with an evil superadded which removes us further from specie payments. A similar result may be expected to follow a dogged assertion of their pretensions on the part of those whom an unsound fiscal system has converted into monopolists. If the opposition to oppressive taxation is not to be allowed to grow into a reaction against even necessary burdens, those who hold the balance of political power must not too stubbornly oppose the movement for revenue reform.

The best antidote to sectional influences, is the prompt and systematic development of a policy so obviously national and just that it shall produce no sense of sectional wrong, and so afford no pretext for local discontent.

The Government of Washington.

We suppose no American ever visits Washington, and looks at the condition of the streets and sidewalks, without blushing—or coming as near blushing as his physical constitution will permit. There are probably few people, therefore, who read of the difficulty which is generally experienced in getting Congress either to pave Pennsylvania-avenue, or oblige the municipal corporation to do it, without a feeling of pain, not unmixed with shame. The peculiar style in which Washington was planned imposed one duty, at least, on the General Government, and that was to see that the magnificent line of communication which was laid out between the Capitol and the White House should present an appearance worthy of its place and use. It was not too much, for instance, to expect that the Government would have bought the adjacent land, so as to control the class of structures which were to go up along the avenue; but if this would have been unconstitutional or impolitic, there was nothing to prevent, and very much to call for, the maintenance of the roadway in the highest state of excellence. It ought to have been ever since the city was founded a model road, as far as grading and paving went, and ought to have been kept scrupulously clean and well watered. Had care of this kind been bestowed on it, and the sidewalks planked and kept in good order, the task of lining it with suitable buildings might have been left to private individuals. It would have been noteworthy, and inevitably the most attractive site for the houses of wealthy men, for the hotels and banks, and the better class of stores; and the lots on it would have been too expensive to permit of the use of them for mean or paltry structures of any kind: so that long before this time we should have had one of the noblest streets in the world, one really worthy to connect the Capitol of a great Republic with the residence of its Executive officer.

As it is, Pennsylvania-avenue is probably one of the meanest and most revolting pieces of roadway in the world. As regards paving, draining, and cleaning, it is exactly in the condition of a street in a Turkish town; that is, it is neither paved, drained, nor cleaned. The road bed is what Mother Earth makes it, a mixture of soil and gravel. The filth of seventy years repose on it, not undisturbed, indeed, but undiminished, save by the action of the elements. What with offal from the houses, general filth, and the detritus of the adjacent hills, the soil is such that one of the finest crops of corn or potatoes ever raised in this country could be raised on the Avenue. The richest prairie or river bottom is nothing to it. It presents in wet weather the appearance of a peat bog, and in dry weather of a sandy desert, or in other words, is alternately a stream of mud and a stream of dust. It has, too, one aggravation of its condition from which the streets of Turkish towns are free—that is, it has to support the traffic of civilization, while the roadway is that of barbarism.

Now, it is about time that this should be changed. A nation collecting and spending a revenue of nearly four hundred million dollars can surely well afford to pave and clean the approach to the seat of its Legislature—which is, by the bye, one of the finest buildings in the world. Going to the Capitol along Pennsylvania-avenue, in its present state, produces much the same impression on one as meeting a gentleman in a lace coat and hat and lace ruffles, and deer-skin leggings. There ought to be something like a sense of harmony and fitness displayed in national as well as in individual externals. But we think we might safely go further than this, and say that Congress might with great benefit to the nation and to American civilization generally, make the one city in its possession a model city. The government of cities is one of the most difficult problems of our politics. The art of making them comfortable, and healthy, and preventing city life being so miserable for the poor, is an art which in all parts of the world is still in a very rude state. We have in this country not only contributed nothing to it, but we have thus far profited very little, or not at all, by the experiments of other countries.

The lighting, draining, police, and sanitary arrangements in all our large towns are still in the rudest condition, and this, owing generally, not so much to a want of desire to do better, but for want of knowledge of what better means. In other words, we want of all things a model city. If half the American population could be set down in Paris every year, and allowed to see what has been accomplished there in the way of making city life clean, and comfortable, and dignified, all our cities would gain immensely by the experience. People would refuse any longer to submit to what they now tolerate, or be content with what they are now content with. Not that Paris is a perfect model by any means. It has been made what it is by processes to which it is happily not permitted to us to resort; and in its reconstruction splendor rather than utility has been most thought of, and the convenience of the laboring population has received very little consideration indeed. But there are in its present condition a thousand hints which we might turn to account, and which would be turned to account, if the people knew anything about them. There is no city in the Union in which it would be possible to make experiments on a proper scale except Washington, which is owned by the whole Union, has been called into existence by the Union, exists for its sake, and would, if the seat of Government was removed from it, probably be encroached on, not by the forest which once surrounded it, for that has disappeared, but by the adjacent farms. Pennsylvania-avenue would bring enormous prices for market-gardening purposes. It does seem, then, that, without violating anybody's rights, the Federal Government might show us how a road ought to be paved, lighted, and cleansed. It makes and can unmake the municipal charter; and the corporation which that charter has called into existence, is neither so ancient or so respectable or so efficient as to render it likely that the people of Washington would seriously object to have either its duties greatly increased or greatly diminished. The House did its duty, yesterday, in passing a bill having the proposed reforms in view, although it may be that the measure does not go quite far enough to accomplish all the objects which we desire to see carried out.

Land in Town and Suburbs.

The contrast in the real estate market between the activity observable in suburban sales, and the dullness which prevails in regard to City property, is marked and inexplicable. The experience of all engaged in operating with City property is the same. They tell of general depression. The animation which for some time characterized sales has disappeared, and stagnation prevails in its stead. Transactions in unimproved property are effected with comparative difficulty, and at stationary not to say declining prices. On the other hand lots in the immediate vicinity of New-York are sold at auction readily, and at satisfactory rates. Of this fact the last few weeks have afforded many illustrations. The Dyckman estate—a large body of land, without streets, bordering the Harlem River, at the extreme end of the island—furnishes a rather remarkable instance, considering the difficulty of transit. The Vandervoort estate, in the Eighteenth Ward, of Brooklyn; the Astoria sale; the sales at Elm Park Station, Linden Park, and on the Westervelt estate, Staten Island; the Mamaroneck sale, at which lots averaging in size four City lots sold for nearly $1,500 each; the sales at Passaic and Cranford, New-Jersey, afford scarcely less noteworthy examples. In all these cases, buyers were confident, and the prices realized were good without being extravagant.

Admitting the presence of a speculative element in these suburban operations, their extent and success are nevertheless worthy of remark. For real estate speculators, of the kind abounding in and about New-York, though a hopeful, are not a reckless, class. They simply observe the tendency of things, and profit by it. If, then, they now direct their attention to the country surrounding the City, it is because the current of interest and enterprise is setting in that direction. Year after year the number of those doing business in the City but having homes in its neighborhood, increases largely. Orange, Plainfield, and Englewood are examples of the growth and improvement that are visible in a greater or less degree at a score of points in New-Jersey and on Long Island.

The fact is clear—its philosophy may not be so apparent. Perhaps the desire for economy is the most potent cause—for to sensible people country homes facilitate saving in half a dozen ways. A laudable ambition to become one's own landlord is another motive which contributes to the prevailing tendency. Men grow weary of exorbitant rents, of capricious and grasping landlords, and of the taxation which local misgovernment entails upon our citizens. Yet again the greater facilities for comfortable travel have a charm which should not be overlooked. Orange, or Englewood, or Plainfield is practically nearer the City Hall than is Harlem; and every week adds to the conveniences of suburban routes. These considerations may not fully explain the greater activity in country property, but they undoubtedly contribute to the steadily-increasing flow of population into the villages and towns which are within an hour's ride of the Post-office.

It does not follow, however, that City values are doomed to sustain any permanent decline. There is dullness but not depreciation, save under exceptional circumstances which everywhere affect sales unfavorably. Moreover, this lack of animation will be but temporary. The suburbs will indeed grow and prosper,—but their growth will be one of the indications of the advance in value of real estate on the island, not an evidence of its decline. The belief that real estate here will ultimately be among the most valuable in the world rests upon a good foundation. Nothing can arrest the advance of New-York toward commercial supremacy; and every step in that direction will impart additional worth to up-town property. Eager investors may now and then overshoot the mark; but the available area is so small that its improvement will rapidly go on after the problem of up-town transit has been satisfactorily solved.

Centuries as New-England.

Could the old worthies who came from Delft Haven to Plymouth two hundred and fifty years ago revisit the scenes of their ancient trials and tribulations "for conscience sake," they would probably be considerably astonished at the new races now settling in New-England. Up to this time the influence and impress of New-England ideas and impulses upon the civilization of the region lying to the west of it has been most marvelous. The constantly-receding front of pioneer enterprise has always had a strong flavor and stimulus of Puritanism, and that fact has had much to do with the solution of the social and political problem of American civilization; but the process has been an exhausting one to New-England itself, and it is now like a nursery-garden which has not been kept fully replenished with new growths, to supply the losses it has undergone by transplanting.

Of late years, two transitions have been going on in the New-England States, silently and steadily, which seem destined at no very distant period to work an entire obliteration of the ancient characteristics of the people of that region. The one is religious, and the other social. Either by natural reaction, or by the advanced assertion of the principle of freedom of conscience—and which we will not pretend to say—a very large proportion of the people have abandoned the tenets of ascetic Calvinism, and have taken to more comfortable doctrines. One hundred years ago, nine-tenths of the population were avowedly strict adherents of the Saybrook platform, and every public social observance was made to conform to it; today we doubt if the same can truly be said of one-tenth. We believe that there is now among the native population of New-England more of what JONATHAN EDWARDS would have called "abominable heresy in matters of religious faith and action" than can be found among any other people of equal number in the Northern States. Without indicating any opinion as to the merits of this change, we refer to it simply as a curious fact.

The other transition to which we refer relates to the population. Statistics show most conclusively that the old stock of New-England people is rapidly decreasing in that section, and that a foreign element is taking its place. Emigration to regions more favorable to agriculture, and more remunerative to general enterprise, together with a desire to escape the sharp social contrasts which have been introduced by the aggregation of wealth, have wrought the change. The exodus through these means has been of the most desirable class of people, for it has become almost an imputation upon the enterprise and ambition of the young men of New-England who have their fortunes to achieve, to find them tarrying in the land of their fathers after they have attained their majority. Notwithstanding the old assertion of the dignity and honor of free labor, a social caste has arisen which will not permit the New-Englander to engage in manufacturing labor without impairing his standing. The result is that the people emigrate to other parts of the country, leaving their places to be filled by foreigners, who throng the manufactories; and some have thought that the probabilities are—based on what appear to be sound estimates—that by the close of the present century the majority of the whole population will be composed of that new element.

Quite recently this probability has been strengthened by a movement to introduce Chinese labor. It has been seriously proposed to substitute the Mongolian for the European race as domestics; and we are told that the company who are about to construct the Cape Cod Canal also propose to import five thousand Chinese to do the work. A few days ago an enterprising shoe manufacturer, of North Adams, Mass., brought seventy-five Celestials to that place, at an expense of five thousand dollars, to take the places of "Patrick" and "Hans" in that business. Of course, the Germans and Irish were indignant at the competition, and threatened violence, but the law is too powerful for them, and they must succumb. If the experiment prove successful, other manufacturers will follow the example, and fresh importations will be made. The result will be that a very curious social and religious admixture will be found in the land of the Pilgrims. The disciples of THEODORE PARKER and the other advanced religious thinkers among the legitimate descendants of those who came over in the Mayflower, will have to contend with the doctrines of Rome upon the one hand, and of CONFUCIUS upon the other. Exactly what the ultimate product of such a juxtaposition of races and doctrines will be cannot be anticipated, but the result must in any case be a singular one to flow from a civilization having such an origin as that of New-England. Inaugurated by the Mayflower, it is not impossible that it is destined to be completed by the Pacific Railroad, with its living contribution of Chinamen. Was Bishop BERKELEY prophetic when he wrote of the course of Empire, that

"Time's noblest offspring is the last!"

Black Beaver, the Delaware.

The Indians of FENIMORE COOPER'S novels are often scouted as pure figments of the brain, by people who contend that no such romantic and picturesque savages have ever had any actual existence. Real redskins, these critics maintain, are of no such clay as "Uncas" or "Chingachcook," but creatures who would have been much more likely to scalp their friend, Leather Stocking, while he slept, than to watch over and protect him. The veritable Indian, according to these despisers of illusions, is simply an excessively filthy and desperately ferocious savage, whose fitful gleams of intellect are inspired, like the cunning of the beast, by hunger, lust, or the thirst for blood. And yet, something in the same way that unexpected psychological marvels present themselves in a matter-of-fact and incredulous age, to show that there may still be a supplied light of things mysterious, or, perchance, to shed light on ancient mysteries—so now and then a dusky figure appears almost, as it were, stalking out of the canyas of the past, to show that such aborigines as COOPER'S really might have existed, and to revive for our imaginations their possible history and achievements.

Such a figure was that of RED CLOUD, whose untutored eloquence, simple yet luxuriant metaphor, and lofty yet unaffected dignity, fairly equal the most impressive of the novelist's characters, and verify the fidelity of his portraits. Another red man now comes before the public eye, whose qualities, if different from those of RED CLOUD, are equally confirmatory of the higher estimate of the Indian character, and of COOPER'S estimate of it. Interest is enhanced in the present case by the fact that this fresh figure is a member—one of the few that are left—of the once famous tribe that COOPER loved to describe. BLACK BEAVER, the Delaware, who is now a very old man, comes before the Senate Committee on Military Affairs with a claim on the United States Government. For many years he has been in the national service. During the Mexican war he commanded a company of Delawares and Shawanos, who were regularly enlisted in the army. Since then he has been employed as guide and interpreter by the officers in command of Forts Cobb and Arbuckle, in the Indian Territory. At the breaking out of our civil war, he had accumulated considerable property which was largely invested in live stock. In the Spring of 1861, Gen. EMORY requested BLACK BEAVER to guide his forces and others to Fort Leavenworth, but he hesitated for fear of losing all his stock. The General assured him, as we are told, that the Government would make up any loss he might sustain, and on this assurance the Chief conducted the troops to Fort Leavenworth, and remained there with them during the continuance of the war. On returning he found his stock all gone, some of the cattle having been stolen by the wild Indians, and some destroyed by the Southern army. BLACK BEAVER now makes what seems a not unreasonable claim for compensation, at the hands of the United States Government.

We are aware of the dangers of mixing up sentiment with business, but we shall be very glad to hear that BLACK BEAVER'S case is reported on favorably by the Committee. Whatever the precise share of the blame or responsibility that belongs to this generation, there can be no doubt that our race has inflicted upon the aborigines of the continent vast and irreparable injury. It will be a satisfaction to know that every opportunity for generous dealing with the scanty fragments of the tribes that remain is met in no huckstering or niggardly spirit. Even with the wild horsemen of the Western plains, more may be done by conciliation and open-handedness than by threats or severity. But in a case like that before the Committee of the Senate—where an Indian has for years been the friend and servant of the Government, where he took the word of its accredited agent to hold him harmless in case of loss, and where, finally, stricken with years, he is positively in want of what is thus due to him—we should be sorry indeed to hear of delay or refusal. The country rejoiced when it heard that RED CLOUD was to have his horses, and we are sure it will rejoice to hear that BLACK BEAVER is to be allowed his claim.

We pointed out yesterday, and the Evening Post repeats our statements, that many of the Canadian papers are crying out for independence or for annexation to the United States. There cannot be a doubt that the people of the Dominion think themselves very much slighted and ill-used by the British Government. Earl GRANVILLE, the present Colonial Secretary in England, has certainly done his utmost to convince them that Great Britain is tired of the connection, and would be glad to savor it. It is quite true that the Dominion took the only sensible and advantageous course left open to it. Once attached to the United States, the people would enjoy prosperity such as they have always been dreaming about, but have never realized—probably never can realize apart from us. But if they wish to try independence first, let them do it—only they ought to waste no more time in dancing attendance upon English Colonial Secretaries. Mr. POLAND'S bill, introduced yesterday, will not come to much, but the day will arrive when the Dominion will cut herself adrift from a connection which is doing her no good, and which is regarded in the mother country with coldness, if not dislike.

We trust there is no foundation for the report, which was telegraphed from Washington, yesterday, that there is a disposition in the Senate to oppose the confirmation of Mr. AKERMAN as Attorney-General. We are assured that there is no objection to Mr. AKERMAN which ought to prevail against him, and that a full and satisfactory exposition of his political sentiments will soon be published. The effect of conceding to the South a representation in the Cabinet, cannot fail to be good, and it would be a graceful act on the part of the Senate, not only to the President, but to the reconstructed South, to yield a ready confirmation to the nomination.

A good deal of the news from Cuba generally turns out to be of the kind that is wished for rather than that which is founded in fact. From Spanish sources, evidently, a number of disasters have accumulated round the voyage of the George B. Upton. It now appears by the latest advices that the vessel, with her lading of war material and combatants, has made another safe landing on the Cuban coast. The rumor of her total loss appears to have been as baseless as the intelligence which sent out a number of gunboats to find her cast ashore. Next to the hurlyburly attending this unhappy struggle must be reckoned the mendacity of most of the dispatches which arrive through Spanish channels.

The Quarantine dispute is becoming more clearly defined. We give this morning the views of sundry influential importers on the question, and some explanation of their alleged grievances on the part of the State officers. It seems tolerably clear that the Health Officer has not been acting in excess of his authority. It is also strongly asserted, however, that the interests of the port are suffering to some extent from Dr. CARNOCHAN'S rigid interpretation of the law. That officer may probably show that any relaxation of his quarantine rules would, at this season, be dangerous to the public health. On the other hand, a due regard for the commercial interests, which he is equally entitled to respect, ought to somewhere bar, of the necessity of carrying down the vessels for Quarantine fumigating, disinfecting, and airing. No satisfactory explanation has yet been given of the present deadlock, and the houses who were represented at yesterday's meeting will certainly feel entitled to expect that explanation, or to insist on a modification of the charges.

The Fire Marshal of Brooklyn has declared upon the occurrence of the Fourth of July. He has accordingly chosen to invoke the aid of the City Fathers in order to secure the proper rights of every citizen to the full equity and enjoyment of our most cherished anniversary. Certain private associations for the benefit of the insurance companies appear to have dictated the step, while the vigilant Mr. KNAPP discovers that the last celebration caused a destruction of ten thousand dollars' worth of property from the reckless use of fire works. If utilitarian considerations like these are to prevail, we shall eventually have some enthusiasm enterprise attempting to produce orange speeches and patriotic oratorios.

No better proof could be afforded of the fact that the recent Congressional force in regard to the Cuban question was unlooked for, and that the resolution which was finally adopted amounts to nothing, than the announcement made from Washington that the President has, on several occasions, done precisely what Congress has just requested him to do. Minister SICKLES, by special instructions, has repeatedly remonstrated with the Spanish authorities at Madrid concerning the inhumanities which have characterized the treatment of the insurgents in Cuba, and assurances have been given in reply that instructions should be forwarded to the proper authorities in Cuba to act in strict accordance with the rules of civilized warfare. Those instructions, if sent, were disregarded; and before the recent debate in Congress, Secretary FISH instructed Mr. SICKLES to repeat his remonstrance, and to request that immediate and positive instructions be given to stop the savage warfare.

The campaign in Delaware is now fully organized, and we are glad to see that there is a disposition upon the part of the Republicans to make it one of a vigorous character. Hon. JOSHUA T. HEALD, the Republican nominee for Congress, is out with an appeal for thorough organization and work, and promises to co-operate for an active canvass. The party has a majority of legal votes in the State, and with proper effort the whole Republican ticket can be elected.

It is to be regretted that the consideration of a subject of such pressing importance as cleansing the streets should have been delayed by an informally concluded report of the Committee appointed by the Board of Health to consider it. Thorough as the changes are which Sanitary Inspector MORRIS recommends, they are certainly not more numerous than the wants of the City demand. Were it not for the exceptional natural advantages of our local situation, we could scarcely have failed to see by this time some striking manifestation of the seeds of pestilence and death developed from the garbage of our thoroughfares. But no natural advantages can be expected to shield us from the consequences of continued and systematic neglect.

The Canal Board, at a meeting held on Thursday, adopted regulations for the Canal patrolmen provided for by the last Legislature. The suggestion for such a police was made originally by Gov. SEYMOUR, in a speech delivered at the Canal Convention, held in Rochester in January last. The Board require the Commissioners to assign a portion of the canal to each patrolman, who shall pass over it daily, see that the water is kept at the proper level, and that it is not unnecessarily wasted, report all leaks, see that the locks are properly attended to, that boats are not overloaded, and that they are kept moving so as not to obstruct navigation. Each patrolman exercises police powers under the law, and can arrest those who violate the regulations. The Board appointed twenty-five persons to the position, and discharged all who had previously been temporarily on duty. The number seems small, considering the extent of the line, and it must be intended largely to increase it, otherwise the arrangement will utterly fail to accomplish the object aimed at.

Gov. HOFFMAN paid a visit to "Sweet Auburn, loveliest village of the plain," last week, and had to pay the penalty of official position by making a speech. He frankly admitted that he had nothing to say, but yet he succeeded in saying something, and in being humorous, and in putting a large concourse of citizens on good terms with him and with themselves. The Governor has a happy way of delivering such addresses, and manages to get through with such demonstrations for all the world as if they were not, what they must be to most people, a very great bore. He announced that if he had his way he would live at Auburn. We hope he may never have his way, if it involved his living there as he does at Albany—at the public expense.

Notes of Amusements.

Public amusements were sparse and dull as the sun grows hotter, but there are some particular occasions at hand that deserve especial attention and patronage. On Wednesday evening Mr. J. A. ZIMMERMAN, the much-esteemed Treasurer of Niblo's Garden, is to have a benefit, when a great many clever performers will assist the regular company to make up a night of unwonted attraction. Among the volunteers are Messrs. Edwin Adams, Henry Drayton, Signor Operti, Miss Annie Ward Tiffany, Miss Viola Plunkett and others....For Friday, the benefit of Mr. L. J. VINCENT, the painstaking Stage Manager of the same house, is announced, and this evening also will witness quite a galaxy of unusual dramatic allurements....Although several of the theaters have closed their doors, "Fernande" is meeting a regular Winter success at the Fifth-avenue. "The Red Light" is still to be seen at Wallack's—where Mr. JOHN BROUGHAM'S presence assures a delightful entertainment. "The Twelve Temptations" continues to hold their own at the Grand Opera-House, and "The Field of the Cloth of Gold" is as gorgeous as ever at the Olympic. The novelty of the day, however, is the capital representation of "The Huguenots," at Booth's.....That sterling actor, Mr. E. L. DAVENPORT, is engaged for six nights at Mrs. CONWAY'S Park Theater, Brooklyn, and will appear every evening this week in favorite impersonations....One of the pleasantest spots at which to pass an hour of leisure just now is the Central Park Garden. Coolness and acceptable refreshments are here added to the attractiveness of most elegant music which, under the skillful conduct of Mr. THEODORE THOMAS, is discoursed nightly.

Political.

The Union Republican Association of the Ninth Assembly District, held their regular monthly meeting at Lockwood Hall, in Abingdon-square, last evening. A number of new members were admitted, and several new members were proposed. A verbal report was made by the Special Committee, appointed for the purpose, with regard to the consolidation of the two factions of the party in the district. It was resolved to take action in the matter at the next regular meeting, and the meeting then adjourned.

GERMANIA IN CINCINNATI.

The Sixth Sängerfest of the North-American Sängerbund—Immense Gathering of Germans—The Instrumental Music and the Singing—Nine Hundred and Odd Societies.

From Our Special Correspondent.

CINCINNATI, Friday, June 17, 1870.

It is a good old custom, joyously observed, as most people know, by the Germans of the Fatherland, with each return of the beauties of early Summer to meet together and enjoy their festivals of song. All classes of Germans enter into these Sängerfests with the greatest enthusiasm, and during the months of June and July the land of the Rhine and the "beautiful blue Danube" is jubilant with the grand chorals of MENDELSSOHN, and the beautiful, touching yet kindling of ABT and FRANZ; and however far from the Rhine the German may emigrate, he still carries with him his enthusiasm for the festivals of his native land. It is that enthusiasm which has inspired the great body of German singers from all parts of the North-west to come this week to the Queen City of the Ohio to unite their voices in the songs of the Fatherland.

THE NORTH AMERICAN SÄNGERBUND.

The North American Sängerbund numbers about 100 societies, which are mostly located in the North-western States. Formerly there were many noted societies of the Eastern cities in this Bund, including the famous Liederkranz and Arion of New-York; but of late years, owing no doubt to the great distance to be traveled in order to attend the festivals, the Eastern societies have withdrawn. But nevertheless there are a number of singers from the New-York societies in attendance here. The Sängerbund took upon their biennial festival as a grand event; for three months past extensive preparations for the event have been in progress. And as nearly all of the German singing societies from the North-western States are here, it is not surprising that Cincinnati has no parallel—certainly not more than one—to the scenes presented in her streets on the opening day of the festival.

THE OPENING CEREMONIES.

The festival ceremonies of the day consisted mostly of a procession. Now, processions in general present the most ordinary spectacles, and this one in particular was no exception to the rule. There were men on foot, men on horses and men in carriages; there were singers, sharpshooters and firemen; there were pretty young lady singers in pretty colors and carriages; and there were bands and banners, the most noticeable of which was a cartoon on OFFENBACH and WAGNER. But the feature which afforded the most amusement to the multitude was a company of mounted Teutonic butchers, whose rotund proportions may be described by the dimensions given to Mynheer Wouter Van Twiller by the historian, Diedrich Knickerbocker, as five feet six inches in height and six feet five inches in circumference; and whose faces were as red as the fresh bovine flesh they were wont to cut, and as innocent of any expression of traces of thought as that of the aforesaid Van Twiller. Yet Cincinnati suspended business and put on holiday attire, decked the walls of her houses with flags and oak leaves and evergreens and roses, and her windows with fair faces, and filled the streets with a multitude of people, so that when the seventy visiting singing societies marched through the streets in the grand procession, there was no need of the thousand banners inscribed "Willkommen, Sanger," to assure them that their reception by both American and German citizens could be no warmer.

THE RECEPTION CONCERT.

The musical portion of the Fest was inaugurated by a grand reception concert given on Wednesday evening in the Feste Halle, where all the concerts will be given. The Feste Halle is a large wooden building, somewhat similar in appearance to the grand Coliseum of Jubilee notoriety, and is capable of accommodating about ten thousand persons. The interior is handsomely decorated with flags, flowers and evergreens, which has such a charm for the German eye. The heart of every German must have been glad as he read those mottoes expressing the German idea of genuine enjoyment of life—the same idea as expressed by HORACE in Vivamus, Floramus. For here was Gaudeamus igitur; Cantatores amant humores; also the very significant inquiry, "Why should a man whose blood is warm within him sit like the grounded cut in alabaster?" to which there was no answer. The appreciation in which he was held who had in him no soul for music was proclaimed in the outspoken motto, "Preposterous ass, who never read so far as to know why music was ordained." Among the evergreens and flags appeared the serene countenances of the German masters of music, from good old HANDEL down to OFFENBACH. Yes, the genial, rollicking author of the can-can music was there in counterfeit presentment, as well as the fearless exponent of the "music of the future," RICHARD WAGNER. Then, passing from the real to the symbolic, the four different kinds of music so popular with the Germans were expressed by four figures, male and female respectively, called "Heldenlied," "Kirchenlied," "Liebeslied" and "Volkslied."

THE INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC.

The opening notes of the jubilee were heard in WILBER's familiar jubilee overture, given by an orchestra of sixty-seven musicians, under the direction of PHILIP WALZER, the "Fest leader." It was soon apparent that this body of musicians had not been accustomed to playing together under the same baton, and that the West had not afforded them those opportunities for practice and improvement enjoyed by musicians of some of the Eastern cities. It was also apparent that this orchestra was too small for the size of the building, hence the effects produced seemed light and thin. But the six thousand people in the Hall were good-natured and enthusiastic, and when the last strains of "God Save the Queen," the finale of the overture, were finished, there was scarcely any limit to the applause.

THE SINGING—ORATORIOS.

The voices were first heard in the "Cincinnati Sänger Greeting," a piece composed and dedicated to the Seventeenth North American Sängerfest by PHILIP WALZER. This piece, which possesses considerable merit as a composition, was sung by the combined Cincinnati societies, 350 singers, with orchestra accompaniment. Then came the choral, "To God on High," from MENDELSSOHN'S "St. Paul," and HANDEL'S "Hallelujah," sung by a mixed chorus of 450 voices. The rendition of these selections made it evident that the vocal exercises of the Festival were to be a greater success than the instrumental, and that there is here, in Cincinnati, excellent material for interpreting oratorio music. The leading singing society here is the Orpheus, which has a large number of excellent voices well disciplined by constant practice. In fact, it is to this society, more than to any other source, that the Queen City looks to for operatic treats, and the Society have given a number of operas with the most marked success. With such a society for a nucleus—and there are other excellent ones here—and with a large German population who are enthusiastic music-lovers, there is no reason why this Western city should not be renowned for the performance of oratorios. The success with which MENDELSSOHN'S Grand Choral was given on Wednesday may well make the famous Handel and Haydn Society of Boston look to their laurels; and so well pleased were the vast audience, that they enthusiastically demanded a repetition of the piece. The "Hallelujah" was given with the same excellence. It was delightful to hear the soprano and altos sing out with such fine effect, and with so much precision and feeling. It is in this department that the chorus societies—the female voices. These young ladies are active members of the German singing societies of this City, are enthusiastic in their good work, and are determined to win laurels for their sex in every public performance.

THE FIRST "GRAND" CONCERT.

The first grand concert was given on Thursday morning with the following programme, as the opening with the following programme of the two following concerts:

PART I.

1. Allegro—Feeling at the departure.
2. Adagio—Longing and yearning.
3. Scherzo—Joy at the sight of land.
4. Allegro—Hurrahing, shouting, rejoicing, and thanksgiving for safe voyage.

"Shower Song," for male chorus, with orchestra accompaniment, by Mr. Arbor, with orchestra accompaniment, for the German Sängerfest, at Nuremberg, by permission of the composer. Executed by all the singing societies, with full orchestra.

Aria for Soprano, from "Fausto's Nachtwandl"....Mozart
Sung by Mrs. Emma Fischer.

Concert for violin in E flat, with orchestra....(Opus 64.)
By Mr. Ferdinand Wolf, of Philadelphia.

"Die Heimath," poem by L. Uhland, composed for Mixed Chorus, with orchestra accompaniment, by Mr. Carl Zerlett, Sängerbund. By O. L. Fischer, royal Prussian musical director at Hanover.

PART II.

Overture to the opera of the "Magic Flute"....Mozart
Concert for piano-forte in F, with orchestra....Chopin
By Mr. Carl Wolfsohn, of Cincinnati.

March—"Night," poem by L. Uhland, composed by C. Kreutzer.

Mennonnes by all singers.

Shadow Dance, Aria, Mr. Sigmund Stern, from the opera of "Dinorah"....Meyerbeer
Mrs. Rinaldo Davis.

"Salamis," hymn of victory, by Dr. Gernshein.

All singers, with orchestra.

Notwithstanding the large capacity of the Feste Halle, the acoustic effect at last night concert, on Thursday evening, demonstrated that it was not adaptable to accommodate all who sought to gain entrance. The building was filled to its utmost capacity, while many were disappointed in being unable to obtain admittance. On the outside of the building, in its near vicinity, a multitude of not less than 5,000 persons had assembled to hear the music, but were very disappointed, for through the many open windows of the past edifice the volumes of harmony flowed out upon the night air, producing a grander and more beautiful effect for the enjoyment of those outside than those inside the hall. The orchestra on this occasion numbered about 100 performers, who rendered the instrumental portion of the exercises in a manner to gain much applause from the audience. Still, they did not do their work so well as did the singers, and it is to be regretted that the rendition of the "Columbus," symphony of ABBERT, the enthusiastic listeners were not treated to one of the grand symphonies of MOZART or SCHUMANN, or even another one of BEETHOVEN'S, in addition to the one, (No. 2.) MRS. DEXTER'S overture was specially well received, although her voice, which is of great quality and well cultured, did not fill the Hall. The Fischer quartet, of Washington, KOPTA, had reason to feel proud of the reception given by the audience to his rendering of MENDELSSOHN'S familiar concerto. He has performed the same composition in New-York, and the skill and finish with which he gave it on Thursday evening afforded a genuine treat to the North-western music-lovers.

An increased interest was manifested in the concert of Thursday evening, from the fact that the body of singers was to be much larger than on Wednesday evening, and that this was the first opportunity of hearing the foreign singing societies. It is scarcely necessary to say that their singing greatly delighted the Cincinnati societies, especially distinguished themselves; yet it is the general impression that none of the societies in attendance this year will gain so many laurels as the Orpheus of Cincinnati.

There will be grand concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings, and the festivities of the occasion will close with a festival picnic on Sunday. The Fest has been a grand success in every respect, and the vast number of Germans in attendance have had a week of genuine fatherland bliss.

BANK ROBBERY IN LOUISVILLE.

The Cashier of the Mechanics' Bank Chloroformed and $63,000 Stolen.

From the Louisville Courier-Journal, June 18.

One of the most daring and successful pieces of villainy ever perpetrated in our city occurred yesterday afternoon. It was no less than the robbing of the treasure vaults of the Mechanics' Bank in broad daylight of a large sum of money, and the escape of the robbers. The facts of this daring robbery are about as follows: Mr. HENRY L. POPE, who, for the last twenty-five or thirty years, has held the position of Cashier of the Mechanics' Bank, occasionally goes to the bank after business hours, especially during the busy season, to count the cash, post the books and finish up the business of the day.

Yesterday the bank was closed at 3 o'clock P. M., as usual at that hour, and Mr. POPE went to dinner and returned to the bank a little after 4 P. M. He sat down in the cashier's office, looked over the daily papers for a few minutes, and then opened the vaults and cash drawers and commenced counting the money. He had been busily engaged in this manner for some time—how long he does not recollect—but he knew the exposition is that it was about 5 o'clock—when suddenly two men advanced upon him from behind. Mr. POPE, when he entered the building, closed and locked the front door, and was standing behind the counter, facing the front door. The foremost of the two men had a huge Bowie knife in his hand, and, as he approached the cashier, upon Mr. POPE and as that gentleman turned his head, made a menacing movement with the knife, and said: "If you make a noise I will kill you," and at the same time threw a handful of snuff into Mr. POPE's eyes. The other man then rushed up with a heavy Indian shawl, which he had taken from the hat-rack in the back room and threw it over Mr. POPE's head. The two men then seized hold of him and dragged him into the back room and thrust him into a stairway leading up stairs and locked the door. The robbers then went back to the vault room and hastily gathered up what money there was in sight and made off. The special deposits of the bank, amounting to many thousands of dollars, were passed upon the shelves of the vault, and were entirely overlooked by the robbers. The cash belonging to the bank was in the cash drawer and in a small vault in the back room, two vault, both of which were open. They scooped the small safe clean, but when they came to the cash drawer they were more particular, only emptying the compartments containing large bills. Scrip and $1 and $2 bills were thrown aside with contempt. They were evidently in a great hurry, and grabbed up the money hastily, according to estimate, containing $1,000, which was left in the drawer, and $63,000 beneath the cash drawer. The money obtained was United States currency, in bills of various denominations, and it is supposed the robbers had a carpet sack, which they crammed full of notes and then left.

How the robbers got into the bank is a mystery, but the most reasonable theory is that they slipped into the bank during the day, and secreted themselves in the back room until Mr. POPE returned from dinner. They advanced upon him from the back room, and were evidently in their stocking feet, as Mr. POPE heard no sound until they were upon him. When they threw the blanket over his head he experienced a sensation of suffocation, and immediately lost all consciousness.

The first discovery of the robbery was made a few minutes before 5 o'clock last night. Mr. W. M. LEWIS, a young man who sleeps in the bank, went there at that time last night, and upon entering the room found the gas turned down, contrary to the usual rule. Looking for a light, and finding the vault door open, suspected that something was wrong, and went to the residence of Mr. POPE, the cashier, and learning that he had not been home since dinner, obtained the assistance of two policemen and returned to the bank and found matters in the condition described above. Mr. POPE was lying in the starch-room, within the short lyre, partly over him, and a bottle which had contained chloroform near his face. He was insensible, but by the application of cold water was restored to consciousness. A large glass bottle partly filled with chloroform, a napkin which had been saturated with chloroform, and a large knife with a blade nearly eight inches long were found on the table.

A hasty count of the cash was made, as it was impossible during the hurry and excitement to ascertain exactly the amount taken, but as far as could be ascertained last night, about $63,000 in currency was missing. Filled with the chloroform, and in the special deposits of the bank, consisting of cash and bonds to the amount of several hundred thousand dollars, which the robbers had overlooked. Mr. POPE was made very ill by his rough treatment, and had not fully recovered up to a late hour last night.

There is but little, if any, clew to the bold robbers. The attack upon Mr. POPE was so sudden and fierce that he was unable to form a fair look at the men, and, consequently, could not give anything like a definite description of their appearance. It is stated that two men, carrying a carpet-sack between them, were seen to leave the bank about 5 o'clock. They evidently left by the front door, as they took the way with which Mr. POPE entered the bank. All of the avenues leading from the city were guarded last night, and every effort will be made to bring the bold villains to justice. This is the second attempt which has been made to rob this same bank in open daylight. The first attempt was a highly tragical affair, and occurred about thirty years ago.

The story, as well as may be remembered now, is about as follows: Mr. PARKER, who was the cashier of the bank, had a friend, a Capt. DIX, of Maysville, who was in the habit of dropping into the bank occasionally. He was a steamboat man, and at any time during the season plying between this port and New-Orleans. Mr. H. JULIAN, of this city, was also an officer of the bank, which was then located on Main-street, between Second and Third. At the dinner hour JULIAN would go to his dinner, and return and relieve PARKER. Upon the day in question Capt. DIX, who had gone to the bank and become desperate, went into the bank, while JULIAN was absent at dinner, and, after looking over the papers and chatting awhile, slipped up behind PARKER, who was at work at his books, and struck him with a slung-shot, killing him instantly. Knowing that JULIAN would return before he could possibly get away with the booty, he determined to lay in wait and kill him also. As JULIAN entered the front door DIX attacked him with a slung-shot, but the blow stunned and JULIAN closed with him. DIX then struck him with the concealed hammer, but without inflicting a fatal injury. JULIAN then managed to get hold of DIX, and they fell together, and rolled down. He then ran into the street and gave the alarm. DIX was captured, but as they entered JULIAN fainted and died, but as he died he made a statement that the robbery was a failure, and that the penalty for murder was more certain than if he had simply drawn a pistol and blew his brains out, as the crowd could seize him. Mr. HENRY L. POPE was appointed cashier in place of the unfortunate PARKER, and, after a service of thirty years, nearly lost his life in defending the property of the bank.

Up to 1 o'clock this morning the robbers had not been captured, and it is almost certain that they are still in the city, and a determined effort will be made to arrest them.

OBITUARY.

Rev. Bernard M. Nadal, D. D., of Drew Theological Seminary.

The announcement of the sudden death of Rev. BERNARD M. NADAL, D. D., acting President of the Drew Theological Seminary, is made elsewhere in this paper. He was a native of Hanover, Penn. He was educated at Dickinson College, Carlisle, where he graduated in 1828. Entering the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church soon after graduating, he soon acquired a high reputation as a pulpit orator. In 1857 the degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon him by Dickinson College as a fitting recognition of his thorough culture and ability. For several years during the war he was stationed at Washington, as pastor of the Wesley Chapel. In this position he performed efficient service to the Union cause, by a steadfast and unflinching loyalty in a city where loyalty was not as universal as it might have been; and the bold and manly stand which he took in the pulpit as well as out of it attracted the attention of Mr. LINCOLN, with whom he soon came to be on terms of a pleasant intimacy. In 1864 Dr. NADAL was transferred from the Baltimore Conference, of which he had long been a member, to the Philadelphia Conference, and was stationed for a year or more at Trinity Methodist Church, in that city. While there he was elected a Professor in Dickinson College, of which he had been elected a trustee in 1861; but he did not enter upon the active duties of this position. In 1867 he was appointed Professor of Historical Theology in the Drew Theological Seminary, at Madison, N. J., then just being organized, and this position he continued to hold until the time of his death, having acted as President of the institution for the period above, since Dr. MCCLINTOCK'S death, a short time since. He was at one time also a Professor in the Garrett Biblical Institute at Evanston, Ill.

Dr. NADAL was an accomplished scholar, a skilled theologian and an attractive and effective pulpit orator. His sermons were characterized by deep earnestness, and were filled by eloquent of style. He was connected with the New-York Methodist as one of its editors, from the time of its establishment, and was a frequent contributor to the Methodist Quarterly Review. At the time of his death he was engaged in writing a biography of the late Rev. JOHN MCCLINTOCK, D. D., his colleague at the Drew Seminary. He was about fifty-five years old.

A few months ago his son was appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate as Assistant Secretary of Legation at London, where he is now residing.

REGATTA ON THE RARITAN.

Boat-Race Between the Students of Rutgers College, New-Brunswick, and Harvard University—The Latter Victorious.

The ancient City of New-Brunswick, N. J., was alive yesterday with a fashionable, numerous and pleasure-seeking assemblage, attracted thither from New-York and other neighboring cities, to witness the aquatic contest between the students of two of the oldest and most historical institutions of learning in the country—Harvard and Rutgers. The cooling breeze that came along the lazy waters of the Raritan River fanned the parched temples of some thousands of enthusiastic sight-seekers of all sexes, who had assembled on the banks, every accessible spot along the banks and on the bridges that spanned the spacious stream. Probably, through the influence exercised by the Raritan Boat Club, whose guests the Harvards were, the anticipations were rather in favor of the University men. In fact 16 miles in advance of the time of the meeting of the Raritan Club, who had been defeated time after time by the Rutgers students, that the latter were invited to throw down the gauntlet to the Harvard crew, in order to silence the malcontents of the New-Brunswick boat Club, who spared no opportunity to whitewash their defeat by the assertion that their crew inferior to any college boat club. The crew of Rutgers were, like the Harvards, elected from the best oarsmen in the various classes, the latter ranking next in efficiency to the celebrated international crew. Boating, as a systematic exercise among the students of Rutgers, is comparatively of more recent date, and is encouraged by the faculty. They have no club-house, and but few boats, but both these wants will in all probability be supplied within this year as nearly $600 have already been subscribed toward the erection of a boat-house. Physically the Harvard men had the advantage. They were of fine physique, and of great muscular development; still, the Rutgers boys were very little behind them in wind-puffs. The race was over a course of one mile and a half and repeat in a straight line, the course being marked out by their own oars and the Raritan Club boat, while the Rutgers men used their own craft. The following are the names of the competing crews:

Harvard—Stroke, F. Yeaman, New-York; R. W. Bailey, Poughkeepsie; E. Goodwin, New-York; T. Casey, Buffalo; E. Gilbert, New-York; H. H. Fitman, Cambridge, Mass.; Schwarm, C. L. Rutgers—Stroke, the Raritan Boat Club.

Rutgers—Corzwain, R. B. Williamson, Newark; Stroke, George W. Seymour, Albany; W. H. Leggett, Hudson, N. Y.; W. S. Lasher, Germantown, N. Y.; A. Van Nest, Millstone, N. J.; E. D. Delamater, Hudson, N. Y.; M. M. Ball, Hudson, N. Y.; Maurer, Boston. Mr. Kellogg acted as Judges for Harvard and Rutgers respectively, and Mr. L. T. Dickson, referee.

At 4:00 the word "go" was given and both crews started off at a fast pace, the Rutgers boys leading, closely pursued by Harvard. Before reaching the Newark Railroad bridge, the superior training and muscular power of the Harvards became apparent, while the Rutgers crew, having exhausted their vigor in the impetuous stage of the contest, fell into the wake of their antagonists, and after many noble efforts to pull up, failed to get along side their competitors, and came in about three lengths behind the Harvards. Time—Harvards, twenty-three minutes and nine seconds; Rutgers, twenty-three minutes and sixteen seconds. The Harvard men rowed beautifully and with clock-work precision, while the Rutgers crew, after becoming too enthusiastic at the outset, soon lost regularity, unless at spasmodic intervals. At the close of the race both crews were cheered lustily, the victors being greeted with hilarious cordiality, even by their vanquished brethren. The Harvard crew bade good-bye to their hosts and started for New-York in the evening.

Probable Homicide Near White Plains.

A fracas occurred on Sunday evening near White Plains, which resulted in one young man having his throat cut so badly that his recovery is said to be quite doubtful. It appears that three reckless young men, residents of White Plains, FRANK SCHIMMEL, JOHN SHERER, and another whose name was not learned, on their way home from a visit to Rye Lake, where they had evidently partaken of something stronger than lemonade, met a peaceably disposed colored man, the coachman of Dr. CLARK, residing on Central Park-avenue, in the Greenburg section of the village, and a young colored girl whom he was escorting to her home. JOHN SHERER, after asking the colored man, according to the latter's statement, which was the road to Rye Lake, and being peaceably informed, lashed him with his whip as he passed by, and after proceeding about fifty yards, turned back with his associates in the wagon, overtook the colored man, and again struck him with the whip. The latter demanded to know what he meant by his assault without the least provocation, and then turned off the road into a narrow lane where the girl lived. Immediately one of his companions, whip in hand, followed the colored man, and after asking the latter what he had said, commenced a brutal assault upon the coachman. A rough and tumble fight ensued, when SHERER's two companions went to his assistance, and in the ensuing struggle the coachman succeeded in some way in without a terrible gash across the throat of SHERER, severing the wind-pipe. The injured man, who is a butcher, was taken home with as little loss of time as possible, and Dr. SCHMID was sent for. He is said to have pronounced the wound as bad as it could well be not to have proved immediately fatal. The colored man says he inflicted the injury with a shell which he picked up in the road, but the impression is that he used a razor or pen-knife. SCHIMMEL acknowledged yesterday that SHERER made the first attack upon the coachman, and without cause. SHERER has been involved in several difficulties of a belligerent character before, and there appears to be very little sympathy manifested for him in the village.

The Steamer Henry Chauncey.

The steamer Henry Chauncey, for the safety of which some apprehension was felt in this City, did not arrive at this port on Sunday as was erroneously stated in a morning paper yesterday, but as was announced in the TIMES she arrived at Aspinwall on the 26th ult. Leaving Aspinwall late on the evening of the 3d inst. she broke her port shaft when but a short time out at sea, and was obliged to put back to port, where, under convoy of the Florence, she arrived at her wharf again early the next morning. The agents of the Chauncey express the opinion that she is now on her way to this City, working her passage by the aid of one wheel.

FORTY-FIRST CONGRESS.

SECOND SESSION.

SENATE....WASHINGTON, Monday, June 20.

Mr. WILSON, from the Military Committee, reported the joint resolution granting condemned cannon for a monument to Gen. NATHANIEL LYON in Greene County, Missouri. Passed.

THE TAX BILL REPORTED.

Mr. SHERMAN, from the Committee on Finance, reported, with amendments, the House bill to reduce taxation.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. DRAKE introduced a joint resolution concerning telegraph companies, providing that all foreign telegraph companies having offices and receiving moneys in the United States are subject to the provisions of the Internal Revenue laws, and requiring the enforcement of said laws as to future and past receipts of income and charges in the United States of said companies. Referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. HOWARD introduced a joint resolution in relation to applications for alteration of railroad charters, prohibiting such applications being received or acted on by Congress on behalf of companies which have received land grants, unless the reasons therefor are specifically set forth.

Mr. LEWIS offered a resolution calling upon the President for information as to moneys paid into the United States Treasury on account of property seized, condemned and confiscated in Virginia by virtue of the act of Congress on that subject. Adopted.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. MCCREERY presented a petition from the Kentucky Congressional delegation for the removal of the political disabilities of a large number of Kentuckians. Referred.

Mr. SUMNER presented a memorial from a former slave, living in Warrenton, Va., during the war, and keeper of a livery-stable, whose stock was taken for the use of the Union army, asking compensation therefor. The memorial being referred to the Committee on Claims, Mr. PRATT, a member of the Committee, said a large class of such cases had already been referred to that Senate. He hoped that some one case would be taken up and disposed of, to show the disposition of the Senate as to the payment of all similar claims.

OFFICERS' ACCOUNTS.

The House amendments to the bill to authorize the settlement of the accounts of officers of the army and navy, were concurred in.

POST-OFFICE APPROPRIATIONS.

At 1¼ o'clock P. M. the Senate resumed the consideration of the Post-office Appropriation bill, the question being on the amendment of Mr. RAMSEY to abolish the franking privilege.

Mr. SUMNER further advocated his proposition for cheap postage.

Mr. CONKLING replied to Mr. MORTON upon the comparative cheapness of our own postage, and by Mr. CONKLING against leading down the franking reform with extraneous matter, Mr. SUMNER's amendment for one-cent postage on half ounce letters was voted down—yeas 19, nays 29.

An amendment for two-cent postage was offered and advocated by Mr. RYE. He said that according to the showing of the Postmaster-General, a saving of five millions per annum would be effected by the franking repeal. Therefore, two-cent postage would still enable the Department to become self-supporting.

The amendment was lost—21 to 32.

Mr. DRAKE moved an amendment, allowing $200 for each member of the Senate and House for postage.

Mr. STEWART favored a radical change of the Post-office by the substitution of a postal telegraph under Government supervision. He said the telegraph had superseded the Post-office as a means of communication among the rich, and the Government should see that the benefit of telegraph facilities would be secured to the rich and poor alike. He went on to criticise the Associated Press and the Western Union Telegraph Company, arguing that the interests of the former compelled it to pander to local prejudices in the dissemination of news, and that the monopolizing tendencies of the latter tended to extortion. A Government telegraph system, he held, would furnish a cheap and ready means of informing the people of the doings of their representatives.

Mr. DRAKE's amendment was rejected without a division.

Mr. SUMNER moved an amendment to allow all newspapers to be sent free to all bona-fide subscribers within the limits of the United States. Lost—29 to 35.

Mr. SPENCER moved to amend that the abolition of the franking privilege shall not take effect till Oct. 1. Agreed to—yeas 30, nays 19.

As all of the amendments to the bill, of the pending amendments, the Senate took a recess till 7½ o'clock, with the understanding that the Southern Pacific Railroad bill was to be the order of business at the evening session.

EVENING SESSION.

THE FRENCH CABLE MONOPOLY.

The Senate reassembled at 7½ o'clock.

Mr. SUMNER submitted the copy of the correspondence from the State Department, setting forth that the French Cable Company had renounced the exclusive privilege conferred upon them to land cables on the coast of France. Ordered to be printed.

THE TEXAS PACIFIC.

On motion of Mr. RICE, the Senate took up as the special business of the evening the Texas Pacific Railroad bill—a bill to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Marshall, Texas, to San Diego, Cal., with branches and connections.

An amendment providing for the consolidation of the Alabama and Chattanooga, the Vicksburg and Meridian, and the North Louisiana and Texas Railroads, and their junction with the Texas Pacific Road at Marshall, was discussed upon the propriety of reviving the old land grants to those companies. The amendment was finally adopted, with a proviso continuing existing grants.

A number of amendments were submitted without action, when the further consideration of the bill was deferred until Wednesday evening.

THE POST-OFFICE APPROPRIATIONS.

The Post-office Appropriation bill was then taken up, the question being on the franking repeal amendment.

Mr. TRUMBULL said he had been and was still a friend of the proposed repeal, but his views had undergone a change during the debate. The Chairman of the Post-office Committee, Mr. RAMSEY, had estimated that an appropriation of $1,300,000 would be necessary to enable the Departments to purchase stamps if the frauds were abolished. The cost of manufacture, the danger of fraud and liability of stamps to be stolen, rendered the proposed system more objectionable upon economical grounds than the franking privilege. Whether in an amendment, limiting the franking privilege to the Departments, and permitting public documents to be franked from Washington City only.

A motion to adjourn was made, when it was found, upon a vote by yeas and nays, that there was less than a quorum present.

Mr. MORRILL, of Maine, moved a call of the Senate, which, after some ineffectual motions to adjourn, was proceeded with.

Upon the conclusion of the roll call the Chair announced only thirty-five members—less than a quorum—present.

Pending a motion to direct the Sergeant-at-Arms to notify absentees, and request their attendance, the Senate at 11½ o'clock adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Bills were introduced and referred as follows:

By Mr. POLAND—Authorizing the President to open negotiations with the British North American Provinces for their admission as States of the Union.

By Mr. BUTLER, of Massachusetts—To assay the Republic of Dominica.

By Mr. RANDALL—Supplementary to the act of the 16th of May, 1870, for the relief of the heirs and legatees of the officers, seamen and marines of the United States vessel of war Peacock.

By Mr. WILSON, of Ohio—To promote the cultivation of the fruit-bearing and medicinal productions of the less populous States, &c.

By Mr. MUNGEN—To repeal all laws and resolutions with reference to spirit rations.

By Mr. CHARLES O'NEILL, of Kansas—Making grants of land to the Preston, Salina and Denver Railroad Company.

By Mr. COWLES—To provide for the paving of Pennsylvania avenue, Washington City. Passed.

RESOLUTIONS AND PETITIONS.

Mr. SHELDON, of New-York, offered a resolution for the payment to the members from Virginia of the same amount of compensation paid to other members of the Forty-first Congress. Referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. FOX offered a resolution instructing the Committee of Ways and Means to report the bill reducing the duties on potatoes and all kinds of fish fifty per cent. In order to have a test vote, he moved that the resolution be laid on the table. The motion was rejected—yeas 68, nays 88. The resolution was then, on motion of Mr. MAYNARD, referred to the Committee of Ways and Means—yeas 111, nays 45.

Mr. COX presented a petition from wine and liquor importers, of New-York City, for relief from inordinate and special taxes. Referred.

BILLS REPORTED.

Mr. CULLOM, from the Committee on Territories, reported a bill to authorize the people of New-Mexico to form a Constitution and State Government, and for the admission of such State into the Union as the State of Lincoln. The bill was recommitted.

Mr. COX, from the Committee on Banking and Currency, reported a bill to require national banks going into liquidation to retire their circulating notes, which was passed.

Mr. SCOFIELD, from the Committee of Naval Affairs, reported the bill extending the provisions of the act of June 17, 1870, in relation to furnishing artificial limbs to officers and soldiers and to the Navy and Marine Corps, which was passed.

CUBA.

Mr. NIBLACK asked leave to offer a concurrent resolution for the appointment of a joint select Committee on the subject of Cuba.

Mr. ALLISON objected.

Mr. NIBLACK moved to suspend the rules.

Mr. FARNSWORTH inquired why the matter should be taken from the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

The House refused to suspend the rules, and the resolution was not received.

At a later stage Mr. MAYNARD asked leave to offer a resolution declaring the full concurrence of the House in the sentiments contained in the President's Message in regard to Cuba.

Mr. ELIOT and others objected.

Mr. MAYNARD moved to suspend the rules.

Mr. FOX moved to adjourn.

Mr. MAYNARD said the majority side of the House desired deliberation, and he withdrew the resolution so as not to obstruct other business.

THE APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. DAWES, of Massachusetts, then moved to go into Committee on the Fortification Appropriation bill.

Mr. JUDD desired to go to the business on the Speaker's table for the purpose of getting at the Senate amendments to the Appropriation bill.

Mr. DAWES warned the House that he had assurances from the Senate that unless that body received from the House all the Appropriation bills this week, it would be absolutely necessary to extend the time for adjournment.

The Fortifications.

Mr. SARGENT, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported back the Senate amendments to the Indian Appropriation bill, and said he would ask for their concurrence on Thursday next.

Fortifications.

The House then, at 2¾, went into Committee of the Whole, Mr. OTTE in the chair, on the Fortification Appropriation bill. The bill appropriates $1,824,700 as follows:

Forts Preble, Georges, and Scammel, Portland, Me.	$75,000
Fort Warren, Boston	25,000
Fort Winthrop, Boston	100,000
Fort Hamilton and additional batteries, New-York	65,000
Fort Tompkins, Staten Island, emplacement	25,000
Fort Schuyler, East River, New-York	25,000
Fort Columbus, Governor's Island, New-York	25,000
Fort Wood, Bedloe's Island, New-York	25,000
Battery Hudson, New-York	25,000
Fort Mifflin, Philadelphia	25,000
Fort Delaware, Delaware River	25,000
Fort Point Battery, opposite Fort Delaware	25,000
Fort Point, San Francisco	100,000
Fort at Lime Point, San Francisco	100,000
Fort at Alcatraz Island, San Francisco	50,000
Construction of temporary and repair of other forts	125,000
Seacoast mortar batteries	75,000
Surveys for military defenses	100,000
Total	$1,824,700

Mr. NIBLACK, who had charge of the bill, explained and advocated it.

Mr. BRAMAN stated that he had information from competent authority of the War Department that these fortifications would not suffer if there were no appropriations made for them, and he gave notice that he would move to strike out the enacting clause.

Mr. BECK advocated the bill as necessary, and said the object of its opponents was to be able to present an apparent economy bill, but they would have to get up Deficiency bills next Winter.

Mr. DAWES, of Massachusetts, advocated the bill. They had let the navy run down, and now it was proposed to let the home defenses run down. We had no apprehensions of war with Spain or any other Power, but neither did we be willing to take the responsibility of inviting war by an exhibition of weakness. He was not willing to expose the great seaports of the country to bombardment, one hour of which would inflict more damage than forty times the amount appropriated in the bill.

The discussion on the necessity or utility of the appropriations, was continued by Messrs. FARNSWORTH, CONGER, JUDD, BANKS and LAWRENCE.

Mr. DAWES reminded the members that a short time since an association of military men met in London and discussed the question of American defenses, when it was stated that the American might overrun Canada and the British Possessions, but that the English with their ships could enter every harbor on the sea-coast and destroy them. He asked whether they were to abandon all effort to put the sea-board towns in a state of defense.

Mr. BRAMAN moved to strike out the enacting clause, which was negatived 49 to 64.

The discussion was resumed. In the course of it Mr. BUTLER, of Massachusetts, said he did not pretend to any great knowledge of fortifications, but had seen a fleet of wooden ships in the channel of a river, running four miles an hour, only at a distance of a few rods between forts with 300 guns bearing on them, and no one of these ships was substantially injured. It was therefore clear to his mind, and he believed he spoke the universal thought of the navy) that it was impossible to build a fort past which a fleet, especially an iron-clad fleet, could not get. The idea of a fort which, even with this bill was that it did not appropriate enough for what was claimed to be done with it, and appropriated too much for what would be done with it. The difficulty with heavy guns on fortifications was that they could be fired only once in fifteen minutes, and the moment that they fired once Farragut, for instance, steaming twelve miles an hour, went three miles and got out of range. In his judgment iron-clads, floating batteries, monitors were the only reliable harbor defenses. Therefore he had been sorry to see a diminution in the appropriation for that purpose in the Navy Appropriation bill, and he should be sorry to see any such expenditure for carrying on harbor stone fortifications.

After a long discussion the Committee rose and reported the bill to the House.

Mr. BRAMAN moved to lay it on the table, which was rejected by a vote of 71 to 82.

The bill was then passed.

THE CENTRAL BRANCH BILL AGAIN.

Mr. JULIAN asked leave to report back from the Committee on Public Lands a Senate bill relating to the Central Branch of the Pacific Railroad in Kansas, which had been taken from the Speaker's table some time ago and referred to that Committee. He wished it to resume its place on the Speaker's table, as the Committee had decided not to consider it, and if it had, it would have no opportunity to report it.

Objection was made by Messrs. TAFFE, MCNEELY, RANDALL, FARNSWORTH, and others, on the ground that the bill in its present condition was dead for the session, while, if it was on the Speaker's table, there would be a chance of its passage.

Mr. DAWES, of Massachusetts, moved to suspend the rules in order to have the bill replaced on the Speaker's table, and argued that its provisions were simply to give to one branch of the Pacific Railroad that which Congress gave in the beginning, the connecting road having been diverted from it by a subsequent act.

The question was suggested to Mr. DAWES, humorously, whether it was not in order to go into Committee on the Appropriation bills as absolutely necessary to send all the appropriation bills to the Senate this week. (Laughter.)

Mr. TAFFE stated that the bill had passed in the Senate by an agreement that Nebraska should aid the road and certain lands to the Nebraska road, and he feared that Nebraska was not to have the benefit of the bargain. (Laughter.)

Mr. FARNSWORTH inquired whether it was the game of odd and even, one road to take the odd sections of land and the other the even sections.

Mr. SARGENT said to the House that it was not the Central Pacific Railroad of California that all this quarreling was about.

The House refused to suspend the rules, and the bill remains with the Committee on Public Lands.

THE ARMY APPROPRIATION.

The House then went into Committee on the Army Appropriation bill, with Mr. HOAR in the Chair. The bill appropriates $29,071,267.

On motion of Mr

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

The week opened dull at the Exchange yesterday, a single sale only taking place, and that one postponed from the Monday previous. The property sold was disposed of by V. E. STEVENSON, SON & CO., and consisted of a lot 25x70, with the buildings thereon, located on the south-east corner of Rivington and Willett streets. The bidding was not very active, and the premises were struck off to E. J. BRADY for $24,000. The sale was made by order of the Court of Common Pleas of this City, and under the direction of L. S. CHATFIELD, referee.

Today, at the Exchange, LAWRENCE, OAKLEY & FLEURY offer some valuable City property, and on the ground at Greenville, N. J., A. D. MELLICK, Jr., & BROTHER sell six desirable lots. For this latter sale a special train will leave the foot of Liberty-street at 11:30 A. M. The property has been extensively advertised, and the auction should be well attended.

To-morrow several important sales come off, full particulars of which will be found in the advertising columns.

An auction sale by LAWRENCE, OAKLEY & FLEURY, of this City, took place yesterday near Willow Tree Station, a mile and a half beyond Jamaica, L. I. The tract laid out for the purpose was called East Lawn, and comprised 300 lots, most of which were 25 by 100, and others 25 by 125 feet. The prices varied from $27 50 to $129 50, the greater part bringing from $60 to $80. Seventy lots only were sold. The property was then withdrawn, on the plea that the cost of the lots amounted to $60 each, including expenses.

WE OFFER FOR SALE

$600,000

Evansville, Henderson, and Nashville Railroad of Kentucky 1st Mortgage Bonds, due in 1897, bearing interest at 7 per cent. per annum, payable on the 1st days of January and July, at the Bank of America, New-York.

The line of this Road extends from Henderson, on the Ohio River, to the State line of Tennessee, passing through the coal fields of Western Kentucky, and forming important connections with Chicago, Nashville, the South and West. Sixty-three miles are completed at a cost of $2,000,000 raised almost entirely from stock subscriptions, leaving only thirty-three miles to be built, of which twenty-three miles are now graded and under contract. The first and only mortgage of all the property and franchises of the Company is for One Million of Dollars, payable as above. The proceeds of the sale will be applied by J. Edgar Thomson, Esq., of Philadelphia, the President of the Company, to finish the work, for which purpose, with the other resources at command, they are amply sufficient. The net earnings of the Road are now quite large, and by the middle of June the coal fields will be reached, which will increase them materially. There is no reasonable doubt that the extensive local traffic of this Road, added to its importance as a connecting link in the great Lines now already been completed, and the remainder will be sold, for the present, at 92 and accrued interest, at which rate they constitute a safe and desirable investment.

Further particulars will be furnished on application to us.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.

A Small Boat Run Down by a Propeller on the Hudson—Three Persons Drowned.

Cases of drowning in the Hudson under peculiarly harrowing circumstances have occurred of late this season. It was only a short time ago that a father and two sons rose from their couches on a Sunday morning, and ran to their death in the river off Catskill. Then, on Sunday last, at Fourkeepsie, PATRICK and JAMES ROONEY, twin brothers, went in bathing, and were drowned from cramps and strangulation. The same afternoon, a man, whose name is not ascertained, was drowned at Matthewstash while bathing. Between 7 and 8 o'clock, Sunday evening, a pleasure party, consisting of WILLIAM MILLER, aged twenty-eight, JOHN BOWLEY, aged twenty-four, ELMIRA MILLER, aged twenty-five, and MELISSA BARTON, aged twenty-one, all residents of the quiet little village of Milton, and widely known, set out in a small boat for an evening's sail on the Hudson. They proceeded to the east shore and landed, and after enjoying a short walk regained their boat, intending to return soon after, but the cooling air and clear starlit night induced them to prolong their excursion till nearly 1 o'clock in the morning, when they started for home, the gentlemen plying the oars and the ladies sitting quietly in the stern of the boat. When about half way over the river, between Cruger's Dock on the east shore, and Milton dock on the west shore, one of the gentlemen espied a few coming up the river, and at once the eyes of all the occupants of the boat were concentrated upon the upward bound steamer, the gentlemen consulting with each other upon the best manner of avoiding the apparently inevitable danger. Suddenly, while watching the steamer that no heed was given to a propeller bound South, and not until the latter vessel was close upon the ill-fated party did they take to their new perilous situation, for the pilot of the propeller thought the night was a clear one and no wind was stirring apparently did not see the small boat. All at once the steamer became thoroughly alarmed. JOHN MILLER shouted at the top of his voice, "Keep off!" and the ladies screamed frantically, while ROWLEY also shouted wildly. In vain were their cries. On came the propeller, steering neither to the right nor left, with all her lights set and burning. A gleaming shriek went up from the ill-fated party, and the sharp bow of the propeller, with speed not in the least slackened, crashed into the small boat, striking the latter with full force amidships, shivering it to atoms, all four ladies and gentlemen being at once precipitated into water seventy-five feet deep. The ladies were hurled to the larboard side of the steamer to the starboard, and the propeller passed on, despite the screams and shrieks of the drowning persons.

But a short struggle ensued. ELMIRA MILLER was the first to disappear forever, going down with strangled shrieks for help. MELISSA BARTON clutched the waters wildly for a moment and then sank to rise no more. JOHN ROWLEY held up longer but finally succumbed to exhaustion. WILLIAM MILLER, seemingly possessed of more endurance, swam nearly a quarter of a mile south, and then, nearly exhausted, landed on Townsend's dock, where he partially fainted. There was no need of his alarming the villagers. The alarm of one of the balance of his party had been heard on shore and efforts were being made to save the drowning persons, but too late. The news of the terrible affair spread like wildfire, and hundreds of people flocked to the docks. After day-light the crowds increased, and fifteen or twenty boats, with grapples and grappling irons drifted about the river all the morning, vainly endeavoring to find the bodies of the unfortunates. As the villagers grouped together and talked over the affair, the pilot of the unknown propeller was roundly abused for his apparent criminal recklessness. The whole neighborhood in the vicinity of the casualty is grief-stricken. It is hardly possible that the bodies will be found under nine days, owing to the great depth of the water.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL WORK.

Meeting of the New-York Association of Sunday-School Teachers—Address by Rev. N. H. Schenck, D. D., and Rev. Edward Eggleston.

The New-York Association of Sunday-school Teachers held its regular monthly meeting in the Fourth Associate Presbyterian Church, corner of Fourth-avenue and Twenty-second-street, last evening. There were a large number of teachers, both male and female, and their friends, present. After religious exercises, Rev. Dr. N. H. SCHENCK then followed in what he termed a plain talk to Sunday-school teachers. It was pleasant for him, he said, to revive early and agreeable associations with the Chairman, in the Sunday-school work, in the City of Chicago. Crossing from Brooklyn, by way of the Catharine Ferry, in coming to the church, he had occasion to observe the great number of children who, in the twilight, had given themselves up to pleasure. He had heard of things written of New-York by sunlight and daylight, but he thought something might be written of New-York by twilight. Gazing up toward the houses he saw wan faces of mothers looking out on the gambols of the children, with whose rent rags the wind sported, and it suggested thoughts not only of the struggles of our poor humanity, but of the duty which lay before us all. He thought of those whom the missionary labored to bring into the Christian fold, and of whom the Savior himself had such a tender care. Although he came to have a familiar conversation, yet he could not help feeling himself in an august assembly, and in such business he was always as deeply impressed as in any assemblage of Christian people. He felt that he was speaking to those who were appointed to be evangelists and teachers in the great vineyard of the Lord. He never saw teachers in the Sunday-school, without realizing the relation of pastor and fold, laboring as they were, in the fashion of the plastic mind of youth, as the Great Creator has fashioned his creatures. The millennial glory of Christ will be when all shall know him from the least to the greatest, and in this work, equal, if not greater in importance than the minority, are Sunday-school teachers. He looked upon the men of Glasgow and Portsmouth and the grandeur of the results of their labors as second only to the great martyrs. These men, and others like them, have given the world to know what great power there is in the Christian Church. At this day all churches in Christendom recognize the importance of this work, second as it is only to the pastorate. The Sunday-school, he must say, in his judgment, must be regarded as in its infancy. True, it had many conflicting elements, and much to mourn as the result of ill-advised counsel, and not according to a Christian zeal with knowledge. The system was almost necessarily voluntary, and while in some churches it is under a superintendent, appointed by the pastor, in others he was elected, and in many cases it was like politicians, who once in, are hard to get out, and of whom it is said, none resign and few die. Conflicting preferences and not a little personal ambition proved in such elections, and sometimes they get a Superintendent who can do much loud talking and singing, but is yet without that magnetic power which leads to Christ, and which, even in the outer world, is of more effective power than any other known influence. If a school has a superintendent not adapted to his office, it is a duty to decapitate him, no matter by what means he obtained his office. And while we may tolerate him while toleration is a virtue, the change must be made the very moment its imperativeness becomes apparent. The pastor was the proper head and supervisor of the Sunday-school, and can never be with impunity or safety for it to a subordinate holding the position of Superintendent. Many a pastor in coming into the Sunday-school, though conscious of being pastor of the congregation, yet feels there is one place where he is not pastor. The better plan was to charge the pastor of the church pastor over all, so that there shall be none of the sections of his people over which he shall not feel himself in duty bound to exercise a supervision. For fifteen years he (Dr. SCHENCK) had appointed all the officers of his Sunday-school, and submitted them for mere confirmation to the teachers, or, as it were, to the Senate; and Senate sometimes have exhibited much reluctance to confirm nominations, yet he had never experienced any such difficulty. He felt on Sunday morning, in passing through the duties of Sunday-school, that he was spiritually prepared for the subsequent duties of the day. Notwithstanding Dr. CUMMINGS, he did not believe the end was just past. There was still much work to be done, and he believed the Sunday-school had a large portion of the work to do. Yet he had noticed some lukewarmness in Sunday-school matters, but God's work had always been wrought out by a succession of coldness and revivals. Many little children for the present day, through the influence of rewards, have come to think that they are doing a great favor to their parents and friends by attending Sunday-school. Indeed, in the language of an eminent divine, ice-cream has become a recognized means of grace in Sunday-schools. So pedagoged and behaved are they, and flattered, that they have become quite phariseical. Some are known to attend two Sunday-schools held at different hours, because, as the boy said, he found it to his advantage about Christmas time. He did not favor adjournments during the hot weather, for the Christian's work was a life-long work. From profession to death it was a chain of continuity, and the Almighty will be more exenge the suspension of the Sunday-school work than he will the Church service, and neither any more than the night and morning worship of the individual Christian will be excused because the days or nights are cold or hot. As in secular studies, so in Sunday-school, it is not to be a constant and steady advance until the infant class has grown into the Bible class, and at this point the teacher should know that his work cannot end until each scholar has realized Christ within the hope of glory—thus ever preserving this beautiful continuity of labor, until each pupil is transplanted from the nursery to the wider vineyard of fruit-bearing Christianity, from whence they shall at last be transplanted by another hand to the garden of Paradise. In conclusion, he said, we all feel that they must ever abide in the vine, and in the end, where many talents borne in their hands, may they be carried to the innumerable throng where the voices of children will ever blend, and the harpings shall be as the sound of many waters, and which have been in our pastoral care on earth here.

At the conclusion of Dr. SCHENCK's address, the hymn, "I Love to Tell the Story," was sung with great effect, when Rev. Dr. WILLIAMS, Rev. EDWARD EGGLESTON, editor of the Independent Sunday-school Teacher, followed in an address on Sunday-school literature. He had no doubt, he said, they would all agree with him that there should be a change in Sunday-school books. He proposed to grumble a little. Grumbling keeps the world straight, and keeps editors the speaker straight, because they know if they go crooked they will have half a dozen grumbling letters. The Sunday-school has a reading membership of five millions in the country, and all at an age when they are most easily molded. He was confident by the present state of the library they were doing much harm. In the first place, there is too much of it. It seems every one in the country who can do nothing else writes for children, and all because an unknown number of this class of books are purchased. Sunday-school books, though they may not be bad facts, yet ought to be free in their atmosphere. In most such books there are characters representing boys and girls who never had any existence, and the children get out into the world disappointed and with distorted views. The characters in such books must have a healthful influence. No more unmitigated nonsense could be given than Sunday-school and other similar authors of blood and thunder novels. Another such dangerous author is CHARLES READE. In the selection of our libraries at present we are going on a chance-shot. Let us have a few good books, and we will not care a cent for the balance. Let us have a few good Sunday-school books, and we will not care a cent for the balance. Let us have a few good Sunday-school books, and we will not care a cent for the balance. Let us have a few good Sunday-school
